Canada Corridor Planned To Tap Arctic Resources

SANDRINGHAM PICKET HIT

BULLETIN

A volunteer picket at the struck Sandringham Private Hospital was slammed into and carried 40 feet on the hood of a Island Security Patrol car at 1:15 p.m. today.

John Reid, 51, of 2511 Dowler Place, injured his left hand slightly in the incident, the first outbreak of violence in the lengthy dispute.

City to Get Power Plant; N-Fuel Out

A $12 million thermal power plant will be built near Victoria within five years, Resources Minister Ray Williston told the legislature Thursday and at the same time ruled out the possibility of using nuclear power to generate electricity.

It was the first major statement on B.C. power development plans in recent years.

The Island also will get 25-50 megawatt plant at Port Hardy. The larger plant would cost $7.5 million.

Use Fossil Fuels in New Plants

Both plants would produce electricity through steam heated by a fossil fuel such as natural gas.

Last February Premier Bennett announced he had asked Ottawa to help in the cost of constructing a nuclear plant near Duncan. The premier later said, however, the Island didn't need a nuclear plant because it is not slated for heavy industrial development.

About half the Island's power is delivered from the mainland in submarine cables running across Georgia Strait from Tsawwassen to Maple Bay.

Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said today he had no comment on the government's power plans for the next five years. Then he said the plans are only "stopgap measures".

Shrum said he has just returned from a conference in eastern Canada where the potential of nuclear generating plants was enthusiastically received.

Nuclear Plans Up to Government

Asked if nuclear plants would play a role in B.C.'s long-range power plans, Shrum said: "I don't know, that's up to the government."

Shrum is chairman of the B.C. Energy Board which currently is conducting a study into B.C.'s energy needs over the next 15 years. A report is expected within a year.

Other projects announced Thursday are:

Construction of a ninth generating unit at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam.

No Site Selected for Plant

Outside the legislature, Williston told reporters the Victoria-area plant likely will burn some form of gas, perhaps a new kind of butane or propane.

He said the site has not yet been determined, but said it would be closer to Victoria than to the Duncan area.

In addition to these projects, Williston said, negotiations between the government and the Alcan aluminum company in Kitimat are taking place regarding financing for a new powerhouse at the Kemano generating station.

If built, the plant would double the power supply in the area. Williston said plans to build a coal-fire generating plant in the East Kootenays have been shelved as a result of the negotiations with Alcan.

"We will produce as much hydroelectric power from non-polluting water situations as we can," he told the house.

That is the government's first priority, he said, and the next is to use thermal plants as power supplements.

Thermal plants do not have prominence in B.C.'s plans, he said, because they do not last as long as dams, and the cost of fossil fuels will continue to increase.

Speaking more generally, Williston told reporters that the terms of reference for the B.C. Energy Board's study of long-range provincial power needs have been expanded.

Under the direction of Jack Sexton, said Williston, the board has been instructed to study all areas of B.C. and make recommendations for developments on a five-year basis to cover power needs to 1990.

The board originally had been instructed to prepare recommendations for immediate needs as well as those to 1985.

He said it is estimated all sprojects would cost about $250 million.

BULLET HOLES in a harbor gasoline storage tank, put there by a sniper late Thursday night are examined by police identification expert Red Brennan. The fire department said the shooting could have caused a "conflagration" in the harbor area. The tank belongs to Standard Oil, which delivered furnace oil to the struck Sandringham Private Hospital earlier Thursday.

Davis Urges N-Plant Power

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Canada's fisheries minister Jack Davis today proposed that a "Canada Corridor" be constructed to handle all gas and oil shipment from the Arctic, including Alaska.

Davis said he is "90 per cent sure that the building of a trans-Canada corridor can begin in 1973."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the B.C. Liberal Party annual convention opening here today, Davis firmly opposed the Alaska pipeline and west coast route for American oil shipments, but said "billions of dollars" must be spent to protect the environment in building a Canada pipeline.

Davis also told the convention that nuclear power is "clean" power, and "single-purpose" hydro electric dams on the Skagit and on the Fraser "can be a mistake."

In any pipeline scheme, Davis said, "it is the pipeline company and the power commission which will have to do the calisthenics. They will have to tear up their drawings and start all over again if the biologist says that the route they propose to follow is wrong," and "dirty from an environmental point of view."

HARD AT WORK

He said the federal government is already "hard at work looking at the idea of a Canada corridor."

He said it is "far safer from an environmental point of view" to put a pipeline through Canada than over the Alaska mountains.

He added that "it makes sense both from an ecological and economic point of view."

RAIL LINE

"So why not push the idea of a Canada corridor from the outset? Why not build an oil line and a gas line side by side? Why not add a road and, possibly, a rail line as well?"

Davis said the Canadian Wildlife Service has been "quietly" looking for a good corridor route for two years and that it might take a "season or two" to confirm a route.

"But I am already of the opinion that an all-purpose Canada corridor is feasible from an over-all environment point of view."

The cost of protecting the wildlife will "run into many billions of dollars" but they will "have to be paid," he said.

On the proposal to send oil from an Alaska pipeline by tanker down Canada's west coast, Davis had this to say:

"No oil moving down our west coast. No American tankers passing under our noses in Victoria. No crude messing up the west coast of Vancouver Island. No opera-

Dismissal Embitters Anderson

By WAYNE MacDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Esquimalt-Saanich's outspoken pollution-fighting member of parliament, David Anderson, has been removed from the important Canadian-American inter-parliamentary committee.

Anderson claims he was deliberately ousted from the committee because he has rocked the party boat a bit — because he has dared to do what he thinks any responsible MP should do.

That is, he has taken a stand in this case in opposition to giant oil tankers running down the British Columbia coast endangering precious coastlines — and he has received a lot of personal publicity for his efforts.

SENIOR IN RANK

This, he claims, doesn't go down too well with the brass of the Liberal party — with Prime Minister Trudeau; with the cabinet; and most particularly with other B.C. Liberal MPs, many of whom are senior in rank and years to the 33-year-old bachelor.

Being ousted from the Canadian-American interparliamentary group is close to being the last straw so far as the island MP is concerned.

After all, it is the United States and Canada that are involved in the oil tanker oil pipeline debate — the question of whether Prudhoe Bay oil should be shipped by an Alaskan Pipeline and west

Gunman Blasts 4 Holes In Harbor Gas Tanks

A gunman pumped four bullets into two storage tanks containing gasoline and solvent shortly before midnight at the Standard Oil Company of B.C. depot, 319 Harbor Road.

One tank, containing 4,275 gallons of unleaded gas, was hit three times and 536 gallons leaked out.

The other tank, hit once, contained 6,288 gallons of solvent and 191 gallons were lost.

Other tanks behind the front two were not hit.

The Standard depot contains about a dozen tanks with a capacity of 314,000 gallons of gasoline, 38,000 gallons of diesel oil, 16,000 gallons of solvent, when all are full.

The shooting occurred 14 hours after a Standard Oil truck delivered a full supply of furnace oil to Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, where employees have been on strike for almost six months in an attempt to get a first contract.

SANDRINGHAM

Alex Markides, staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees whose Local 1311 is on strike at Sandringham, said this morning he is "very disappointed" the shooting occurred and said the union has no knowledge of it "and we wouldn't take such action."

"Action of this nature helps no one," he said.

Victoria city police received a report of the shooting at 11:51 p.m. Their investigation is continuing.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said: "It was a serious situation and one that could have caused a conflagration in the harbor area."

There are a number of businesses in the area, including the Canadian government marine transport department, Nicholson Murdie Machines

MPs May Get $2,000 Hike

By VICTOR MACKIE
(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — An immediate raise in salaries for members of Parliament to $20,000 from the present $18,000 a year was suggested to the Liberal caucus this week as a possible first step the government may take to improve their take-home pay, it was learned today.

AGREEMENT UNLIKELY

The government is also sounding out other party representatives in the Commons as to their reaction to a total indemnity of $33,000 to be effective in the next Parliament after a general election.

That proposal, greeted with some incredulity from some members of the opposition, would involve the establishment of a taxable indemnity of $25,000 plus a non-taxable expense portion of $8,000. The government would like to get

JAM LEGISLATURE OVER PENSION FIGHT

Strong Support for Teacher Strike

By DON VIPOND

Better than nine teachers out of 10 stayed away from schools in the Capital region today, strongly supporting their federation in its fight with the provincial government over pensions for retired teachers.

Only schools for the handicapped were staffed as the one-day strike called by the B.C. Teachers' Federation was underlined by a crowd of teachers at the legislature.

Local teachers were joined by both active and retired teachers' delegations from the lower mainland and groups from up-Island in what a local official termed "not a rally but a presence" to show legislators their concern.

Basic issue is the level of pensions for retired teachers. The provincial government, which administers the pension plan, has proposed increases but the teachers' federation says it's "not enough."

$10 INCREASE

The federation estimates the average pension of retired teachers is $2,500 a year. The government has planned increases of about $10 to $20 a month.

Last fall the teachers voted to strike if necessary for improved pension benefits. They left the decision with the executive which has called today's one-day walk-out.

Coates said workers in the machine shop heard the shots and reported the leaking tank. One of them plugged the hole in one tank with a wooden peg.

The pressure in the solvent tank made the liquid spurt out and over the four-foot concrete dike, landing about 15 feet away by the side of Harbor Road.

Foam and sand were applied later.

Solvent is flammable, but not explosive, one official said.

Police, asked if they had heard of a car speeding from the area, said only: "We're investigating two or three leads on this but we don't want to say any more right now."

Officials of Standard Oil in Victoria were not available for comment. District sales manager F. D. Rodway was reported on vacation and his assistant was not in his office.

Two hours after the furnace oil was delivered to Sandringham Thursday, pickets appeared at the Standard Oil depot protesting the action. Union officials said Standard Oil drivers are non-union.

RETURNED

A Standard Oil truck roared into the depot at 8:15 a.m., narrowly missing three pickets and a newspaper reporter on the street. The truck gave one blast on his horn but did not slow down.

A few minutes later, a man who said he is a sales representative for Standard Oil appeared with a Polaroid camera and took pictures of the pickets and the reporter.

He declined to give his name to the reporter or to say why the pictures were being taken.

When asked why he was photographing a reporter as well as the pickets, he said only, "I've got a good picture of you."

A police car cruised the area for a few minutes and left.

At 8:30 a.m., three men came out to inspect the bullet holes in the two tanks.

FEW DAYS

In the strike, the around-the-clock picket line at Sandringham was discontinued Thursday night. Daytime picketing was to continue. Union officials explained that the hospital won't be taking fresh furnace oil for a few days.

Asked about a labor boycott of Standard Oil, Victoria Labor Council president Jack Groves said it is "automatic with any company that crosses a picket line. Union people will not patronize that company. I would hope the B.C. Federation of Labor will declare Standard Oil hot products."

On a radio open-line show this morning, Sandringham supervisor Mrs. Margaret Reynolds and Markides agreed to meet if only to discuss accusations of abusive language by hospital pickets and people who have filled their jobs.

ONE-DAY WALK-OUT 'NOT GOOD ENOUGH'

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — The 250 teachers of the South Peace school district called today for the resignations of teacher federation executives for calling only a one-day strike.

A spokesman said the teachers believe a one-day walkout is not sufficient to influence the government.

. . . TEACHER STRIKE

Across the province it meant a warmly-welcomed holiday for almost half a million pupils. Schools were technically open, a handful of teachers showed up for work, but there were no classes.

Sports events scheduled earlier in schools went ahead.

68 IGNORE CALL

In Greater Victoria, where there are 62 schools and 1,387 teachers, a check of all but one school showed 68 teachers ignored the federation strike and went to school.

Two elementary schools and a senior high school accounted for many of them, said a Greater Victoria Teachers' Association spokesman, but declined to name the schools.

In the Sooke school district, where there are 21 schools, 268 teachers and 6,749 pupils, about a dozen teachers showed up for work.

BOYCOTT

The teacher boycott in the Saanich school district, where there are 18 schools, 233 teachers and about 5,300 pupils, was estimated at least 90 per cent.

Jack Armstrong, chairman of the Saanich school board, said he thought the strike, first province-wide in the 55-years-history of the BCTF, "was an exercise in futility" which did nothing but upset parents, teachers and trustees.

The federation would have been further ahead to have its 22,000 member-teachers contribute a day's salary for the benefit of retired teachers.

Today's action was "a day to forget." He said he didn't anticipate any "repercussions" from the boycott.

Jim Killeen, president of the teachers' federation, said members were giving up about $1.2 million in lost wages through the protest in what he called "an appropriate response to highlight the plight of retired teachers."

Food Firms 'Facing Bankruptcy'

Spokesmen for British Columbia grocery products manufacturers told the legislature's agriculture committee today the proposed Synthetic Food Products Act could lead to bankruptcy for many companies.

Appearing on behalf of the Grocery Products Manufacturers, President Ernest Steele said the bill, now before the house, said virtually no food products are free from some form of processing. Steele said the bill gives the government broad powers to restrict the sale of synthetic foods and implies that processed foods are inferior to natural farm products.

Another weakness in the bill, he said, is that it creates an artificial distinction between natural and synthetic foods. Steele added that this could result in a "protectionist" attitude by the government favoring farm products.

He said that all processed foods in Canada are subject to federal food and drug regulations.

"It is simply not true, therefore, to infer or to imply that there is some simple category of synthetic products which can be sold without the normal scrutiny of these procucts."

. . . ANDERSON

coast shipping route versus an all-Canadian MacKenzie Valley land pipeline.

Anderson thinks he could have done a great job on the committee in influencing American opinion. And he has already made inroads by appearing — at his own expense — before congressional hearings in Washington on this very question.

And the decision, he claims, was made by newly-elected Liberal party whip Lloyd Francis of Ottawa and the government house leader, privy council president Allan MacEachen.

POLLUTION

Anderson, chairman of a Commons committee on environmental pollution, was delivered a blow Thursday when a number of government members refused to permit debate on a motion that his committee be allowed to meet in Vancouver and Victoria later this month on the oil issue.

He blames part of the Commons mess on himself. Although suffering from a back injury, he came into the Commons Thursday afternoon to make his motion, but he says he should have been better prepared.

He should have made certain a formal vote could have been taken on the motion to adjourn debate — which, under the technicalities by which the Commons operates — really meant a vote on whether the committee would meet in B.C. or not.

"I should have had five members ready to stand up and appeal and force the vote," he said. "It would have been pretty interesting to see how the B.C. cabinet ministers voted."

Bitter?

Yes.

What now?

"I don't know. I guess personal initiative isn't appreciated too much and I've been getting a lot of publicity.

It's starting to come home."

Anderson is not sure what other forms of "punishment" may be awaiting him for his misdemeanors in the cause of B.C. interests.

B.C. Water Proposal Doesn't Worry Davis

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said today he is not bothered by B.C.'s proposal to assert its constitutional rights over water resource management. (See Page 6.)

In an interview, Davis said there will always be "a sawoff" between Ottawa and the provinces when the question of dual jurisdiction rises over water uses.

Davis had not seen the draft legislation introduced Thursday in the B.C. legislature by Resources Minister Ray Williston. After reading press reports of the draft legislation, Davis said: "I know the provinces resent Ottawa having any say in water matters," but it is "a fact" that fisheries is a federal jurisdiction.

Asked about the conflict last fall over providing water in the Goldstream River when he ordered sufficient flow for salmon spawning, Davis said there need not have been a conflict if there had been "forward planning" to take care of both fish and domestic water needs.

He said "We don't believe in single purposes" for water use, but "we have to come up with joint solutions."

Davis said he thinks the province is "much more worried" that the federal government might prevent building of the Moran dam on the Fraser River.

"Constitutionally we could make it completely uneconomic," Davis said, by demanding inclusion of fish hatcheries and ladders in any dam construction.

GOOD THING

"It's a good thing there are two levels of government." Otherwise one level of government would go "barrelling ahead" on its own.

"It doesn't bother us that we have a federal system," he said.

"In the area of water there have to be these public confrontations and resolutions."

Canadian nuclear reactors produce "the cleanest power of all," Davis said, adding they produce "no spills" and "no losses of radioactive material."

BIG DAMS

Davis said "big hydro dams in the right place may be best from an overall environmental point of view. But single purpose projects like the Ross Dam on the Skagit or the Moran Dam on the Fraser can be a mistake.

"They can do more damage, environmentally speaking than they are worth. They may disrupt scenic values."

Davis, who is the designated minister of Ottawa's emerging department of environmental protection, said the ecologists must be brought in at an early stage and they "must have a veto if environmental considerations suggest that a project is contrary to the public interest."

He said the ecologists will be a "well organized department or agency which takes a multi-disciplinary approach to things and which is given its say before our energy buffs start revving up their bulldozers or spudding their drills into our living land."

He said that his department's inspectors will "keep a close eye especially on coal and oil."

Coal mined in the Rocky Mountains but discarded from the shipments to Japan is "an eyesore" and "cheap." If the coal is burned "we will have to make sure that there are no spillovers of noxious gases into the U.S.A."

Controls will also apply to oil refineries processing low grade crude oil and power plants burning residual oils.

Davis said "energy is no longer in short supply. Shortages are a thing of the past and spills are what we have to attend to."

VANCOUVER (CP) — Foon Jack Jung, Yue Get Jung Jack Yau and Chuck Quon were all charged Thursday with possessing obscene film and were remanded until April 2 for trial.

Mass for Boniface

A solemn high mass will be held in St. Andrew's Cathedral at noon Monday for Father Boniface of the Order of the Franciscan Monks, who died Thursday at St. Joseph's Hospital. He was 90.

Bishop Remi De Roo will officiate.

Born Dec. 6, 1880, at Veri, Germany, in the diocese of Paderborn, father Boniface entered the order Nov. 1, 1902, at Amiens, France.

He made his profession as a Franciscan on Nov. 4, 1903, at Cleveland, England, and was ordained to the priesthood Dec. 20, 1908, at Quebec City.

All 63 years of his priesthood were spent in western Canada.

Immediately after the solemn high mass Monday in Victoria the body will be taken to Vancouver where it will lie in St. Francis parish, which he founded. Beginning at 8 p.m., his former parishioners will pay homage to their priest.

Tuesday at 10 a.m. the provincial of the Franciscan Fathers, Fr. John Forest Galvin, O.F.M. will celebrate another funeral mass.

This will be followed by burial in Vancouver's Ocean View Cemetary.

Wage and Price Checks Studied

OTTAWA (CP) — The government has been studying various programs of voluntary and compulsory wage and price controls that might be applied if inflation again becomes a problem, Finance Minister Edgar Benson told the Commons today.

all-party agreement to such a proposal and announce it during the next election, but that agreement will not be forthcoming.

As an alternative the government may simply announce at the next general election that if it is returned the indemnity for MPs will be substantially increased without announcing how much of an increase is proposed.

IDEA DROPPED

It was apparent from the outline provided the caucus this week by government House Leader Allan MacEachen that the cabinet has abandoned the idea of abolishing the tax-free expense allowance recommended by the Beaupre commission.

The commission, headed by T. M. Beaupre, president of Domtar Ltd., recommended that MPs salaries be boosted to $25,000 but that it all be taxable.

Several Liberals have protested that this would not mean much of a take-home pay increase.

CAPISTRANO BIRDS RETURN ON TIME

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI) — The mission bells pealed as the sun broke through the fog and the swallows returned to Capistrano on schedule today as they have for nearly 200 years.

Nearly 4,000 tourists gathered, including 500 campers who waited overnight, to watch the birds return.

Each year on March 19, St. Joseph's Day, the birds arrive at the mission here, California's oldest existing structure. They depart for Argentina Oct. 23.

Stray Feathers

By HAROLD HOSFORD

By HAROLD HOSFORD

Shades of the permissive society! A sexually aroused male blue grouse passionately booming out his heart in Oak Bay Junior High School, and not a school trustee in sight to raise a hue and cry.

Now blue grouse are bona fide B.C. residents and it's not unusual to hear their eerie booming or hooting in mid-March. But in Oak Bay Junior High School? The wooded slopes of Mount Finlayson maybe — but Oak Bay Junior High School — never!

Yet there it was, the unmistakable whoomp-whoomp-whoomp, reverberating through those hallowed halls. And the worst of it was, the locals — enrolees in Victoria's evening adult education program — seemed completely unconcerned, like it was an every-day occurrance. At least an every Wednesday evening occurrence.

I eventually tracked the sound — blue grouse are notorious ventriloquists — to a room at the end of a long hall in a wing of the school. There sat the class — all 21 of them — transfixed. An instructor, at the head of the class, was going through some strange convulsions — the result of which was that eerie whoomping I'd heard at the front door.

It was Ralph Fryer giving one of his most inimitable performances—the passionate booming or a male blue grouse. Beside him stood Dave Stirling, trying not to look embarrased by Ralph's efforts, and absent-mindedly fingering the pages of a Peterson Field Guide as the performance continued. I had entered the rarified atmosphere of one of the most unique classes in Victoria's adult education program — the class in bird identification. Ralph and Dave were the instructors.

Here in this room, one night a week, for 10 weeks, at $15 a head, a biologist, a graduate nurse, two physiotherapists, a retired logger, several housewives, a mother and daughter, a couple of husband-and-wife teams, a retired school principal, a student, a book store clerk, a retired cement maker and a plumbing and heating contractor pit themselves against The Book — in this case the bird book.

In a course which includes sound recordings (Ralph's efforts supplement (these) motion pictures and the combined practical field experience of the two instructors, the class is introduced to about 150 of the more common birds of the Victoria area. It's really more than an introduction because the respective members of the class will have to prove both in the field and at the examination desk that something of bird identification has rubbed off.

This is the third of these classes. They started last winter. Ralph and Dave had played with the idea for more than a year before they put it to the Greater Victoria School Board. With some misgivings the board decided to try a pilot class and await results.

The rest is history, full enrolment and enthusiastic comment from all involved. It now looks as if the classes will continue as long as the supply of potential bird watchers holds out.

Why do grown people pay good money just to learn to identify birds? I asked a few of the members of the class. Predictably, most were interested in the outdoors whether as golfers, sailors, walkers and hikers, fishermen or hunters and all wanted to get more out of their outdoor activities.

I was surprised to find that none of the group fitted the traditional picture of a bird watcher — a tweedy, professor milquetoast loner. All were interested in people and sharing their experiences with people. All were curious about the natural world around them and all thought that learning about bird identification was legitimate education as much as mathematics, physics and the other disciplines.

One — with a gleam in his eye — claimed Dave Stirling, his neighbor, had conned him into joining. But I noticed when the group got to work, our reluctant recruit was right in there with the rest of them.

Any day now, 21 new recruits in the bird watching game will be taking their final field tests. After completing the written part of the test on the proper descriptive language for birds, family characteristics, specialized species, anatomy and morphology, they'll put this knowledge to practical use — identifying the birds they see.

Ralph and Dave readily admit you don't make an 'expert bird watcher in 10 easy lessons. What you do is teach them the techniques, how to use the tools of identification now available, the field guides and checklists so essential in avoiding the pitfalls that used to beset the unsuspecting tiro birder.

What worries me though is Ralph's imitations. If the whole group picks up the technique, look out for a spate of blue grouse reports in the next month.

'Unbiased' Log Probe Sought

The B.C. Wildlife Federation called Thursday for an independent study into the problem of log and debris salvage in the Strait of Georgia.

Geoff Warden, executive director of the federation, said the study should be carried out by an organization "answerable neither to the forest industry nor the provincial government's forest service."

* * *

He told the legislative forestry committee that the system would ensure an unbiased approach to the problem.

Earlier, the B.C. Council of Forest Industries in a brief from president G. L. Draeseke took the view that the industry contributes only a tiny share of floating and beach debris.

Warden said the industry is attempting to underplay its contribution to the problem.

"The largest proportion of the most hazardous material originates with the forest industry . . ." he said.

* * *

The wildlife group recommended that log salvors be paid on a "service rendered" basis rather than on a market value basis for logs salvaged.

This would help end the reluctance of salvage workers to pick up logs of low or negligible market value, Warden said.

DONATE PAY: BENNETT

Premier Bennett said Thursday he can't understand why teachers would want to take a day off without pay when they could work and donate the money to retired teachers.

Bennett was commenting on the strike today of B.C. teachers as a protest over the size of increased pensions for retired teachers.

He said B.C. had "thousands and thousands" of dedicated teachers. There was a time when they were not paid well but today they are not only properly paid but they have good fringe benefits, "a wonderful pension plan" and lots of holidays, he said.

"One thing I can't understand is when they have summer holidays, Christmas holidays and Easter holidays coming up, why would they want a day off without pay?"

Asked about the retired teachers as he walked away, Bennett said nothing, but returned seconds later to say that the teachers should have given the day's pay to retired teachers.

Power Treaty 'A Blunder'

Resources Minister Ray Williston said Thursday that $167 million in unforeseen costs due to inflation and high interest rates have upset the government's Columbia River Treaty projections.

Williston said the costs of inflation have added $117 million to the Columbia power project and rising interest rates added another $50 million.

Initially the government hoped to pay for the dams and half the generating capacity at Mica from the $274 million recived from the U.S. seven years ago under the treaty, Williston said. But now that won't be possible, he added.

3-MILL POWER

However, Columbia River power at 3-mill cost instead of the once-projected 1½ mills will still be the cheapest power in North America, he said.

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said new government figures on B.C. Hydro projects show that the Columbia River Treaty was a far worse deal than anyone ever believed.

Barrett said only $10 million remains from the treaty, but Mica Dam construction and related projects will cost another $427 million. That's a $462 million deficit, Barrett said.

Barrett said the treaty has proven to be a "monstrous, stupid, foolish" blunder.

'COUNTRY BOYS'

"You were the country boys with the Yankee traders," he told Williston.

New Democrats and Liberal Leader Pat McGeer hammered away at Williston for the expenditure of an estimated $20 to $30 million in general taxpayer revenue on Libby Dam pondage work which they said should have been charged to B.C. Hydro under the treaty.

Williston replied that the work will create flood control benefits in the Creston flatlands which cannot properly be charged to Hydro.

Opposition Leader Barrett said the work was charged to the taxpayers after the government realized it had blown the Columbia deal.

SLASH BURNING

On another topic, Williston said the practice of slash burning would come to an end in B.C. in two or three years. He was replying to Liberal Leader Pat McGeer who criticized the "noxious practice" and called for mechanical methods of clearing slash.

He said coastal forest mills will soon have the equipment to make use of slash material.

Bob Williams (NDP — Vancouver East) said the $300,000 the government spends to prepare crown lands for sale or lease is insufficient.

He urged the government to create a revolving fund which would pay for itself in a few years through sales of the lands.

IMBALANCE

Williams praised the lands department staff, but said the weakness in government policy is the imbalance between the large agount of administrative work in the lands department and the relative lack of land development work.

More development would mean more provincial revenues, Williams said.

Williams said it has been some time since the government announced it was going to study stumpage rates and crown royalties but no results of that study have been published.

Williston said the matter is still under study. And Williams said the issue here is that forest companies get better tax breaks than provincial landowners.

SCHOLARSHIP

Proceeds of the concert will be used for music scholarship funds.

Derek Healey will present a music concert April 7 at 8 p.m. in MacLaurin 144. There will be two first performances, as well as a repeat performance of Butterflies, which was so successful in last year's Victoria Fair.

The Canadian Broadcasting Company plans to record this concert.

In the visual arts, two current exhibitions show the work of students and faculty.

'Discrepancies' In Answers

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer told the legislative public accounts committee Thursday he is concerned about apparent "discrepancies" between government answers to questions about its advertising and tear-sheets of specific advertisments.

McGeer asked for assurance that he would get a chance to raise the matter later in open session of the committee and was told there would be opportunities for further discussion.

McGeer said he is still studying the discrepancies which he said are to be found in answers about government advertising during the 1969 election campaign.

Weekend Display By Uvic Students

Life at the University of Victoria will be re-enacted in Centennial Square Saturday from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. when the university's Alma Mater Society presents displays and events as a special centennial program.

Organizer Ron Armstrong will be master of ceremonies for the program which will include demonstrations of fencing, karate, judo, folk music, folk dancing, theatre and student art.

Taking part will be members of clubs organized by the society.

HYDE PARK

Schedule of the events is:

Hare Krishna, 10 a.m. and 1 p.m.; fencing, 10:20 a.m. and 1:20 p.m.; folk dancing, 10:40 a.m. and 1:40 p.m.; folk music, 11:15 a.m. and 2:15 p.m.; karate, 11:30 a.m. and 2:30 p.m.; theatre, 11:45 a.m. and 2:45 p.m.; music, noon and 3 p.m.; climbing display by the Outdoors Club, 12:20 and 3:20 p.m.

Members of religious clubs, Miles for Millions and World Federalists will also be on hand.

The university's faculty of fine arts has several public projects planned for the last two weeks of term.

The University Chorus with full orchestra will present the French works, Faure's Requiem and Poulenc's Gloria, March 29 at 8 p.m., in the university's gymnasium. Goerge Corwin will conduct.

SCHOLARSHIP

Proceeds of the concert will be used for music scholarship funds.

From the Ground Up

BRITISH COLUMBIA TEACHers' one-day strike to advertise their protest against the provincial government's proposed rate increases for teachers now on pension has roots far in the past. The long story of teachers' pensions in this province has been marked by at least one collapse of the funding arrangements, and efforts to improve or rehabilitate the system from time to time.

One of the early causes of trouble was a natural desire — indeed necessity — to provide for retiring teachers who had not had an opportunity to build up sufficient equities in the new pension fund to return them a livable income. Payments from the fund therefore drained its resources.

In recent years, the rapid rise of living costs, and also of pay scales, has not been reflected for many older teachers in their retirement incomes. Some now face a serious problem of survival on a pension for which they had made all the contributions required but which today is not adequate. A current criticism of the funding arrangements is that the teachers' pension assets are tied up in low-yield bonds selected by the provincial government, with a corresponding shortage in revenue.

Obviously, what is required is a whole new deal for the teachers' pension plan, with contributions from the participants and their employers which will sustain a workable program. The program should be reviewed each year to adjust its revenues to the foreseeable demands on it in the light of inflation and other factors. It is incongruous for the teachers to have to go repeatedly to the government with special requests for supplementary infusions of life for the fund.

Hundreds of pension plans in industry, government and other fields operate successfully. There is no reason why the government and the teachers, with stable employment and a steadily rising pay rate, should not be able to devise a viable and adequate plan. Patchwork rescues and one-day strikes are no substitute.

The Grinding SALT Mill

IT IS COLD COMFORT THAT one U.S. official connected with the resumed Strategic Arms Limitations Talks (SALT) has asserted that the fruitlessness of the talks so far is no cause for pessimism, considering the complexity of the issues. His further remark that no real progress is expected till the end of this year is also a very cool form of encouragement.

The issues involved are complex and they are becoming even more so as time passes. In the 16 months since the inception of SALT the U.S. has put MIRVs (multiple individually targeted re-entry vehicles) into its Minuteman III, Polaris A-3, and Poseidon missiles. The Russians are developing MIRVs, have multiple re-entry vehicles (MRVs) in their SS-9 and SS-11 intercontinental ballistic missiles, and have recently concluded a series of tests of a fractional orbital bombardment system (FOBS).

These weapons systems have emerged since the first strategic arms talks began and it is hard to believe that they have been developed merely as bargaining counters in the SALT talks. Their development is the traditional response to fear and not a tenuously rational diplomatic move. Indeed, the concept of developing individual bargaining counters has almost no chance in the intricately interdependent modern weapons system.

The notion that the deployment of anti-ballistic missiles by the U.S. could be used as a counter probably has no further validity since the Russians' construction of SS-9s and SS-11s has complicated the ABM situation. A complete disarming of ABM defences by both the U.S. and the Soviet Union would no longer have the same strategic effect. These are merely some of the developments.

But the problems are not only technical and intricate — they are basic. There has been no agreement on the definition of "strategic arms." The American and Russian definitions of "tactical weapons" differ. In short, the talks have a long way to go before getting down to substantive agreements.

A major shortcoming of the talks is that they have not set the psychological basis on which a de facto weapons detente could proceed. The fine print and the formal signatures must follow a relaxation of tension; they are the final stage of a process of delicately built goodwill, not its beginning. After disarmament talks stretching back to 1899 this seems to be elementary.

Financial Snooker

ONE OF THE EXPLANATIONS for heavy American investment in Canadian resources, development and industry is that a large number of Canadians with funds to invest seek opportunities outside the country rather than within it. They put their money into alien enterprises from which they expect good and safe returns and, as the argument goes, ignore the opportunities in their own land. In consequence, American capital flows into Canada, and with it an influence that can be inimical to Canada's national interests.

Waterloo's NDP federal member, Mr. Max Saltsman, suggests an interesting means of redressing this situation. He proposes that Canadians with a penchant for investment put their money into the big American concerns now buying up Canada. Ultimately, the intent would be to acquire control of the United States interests — and thence their control of Canadian resources and development — only a few billions of dollars needed.

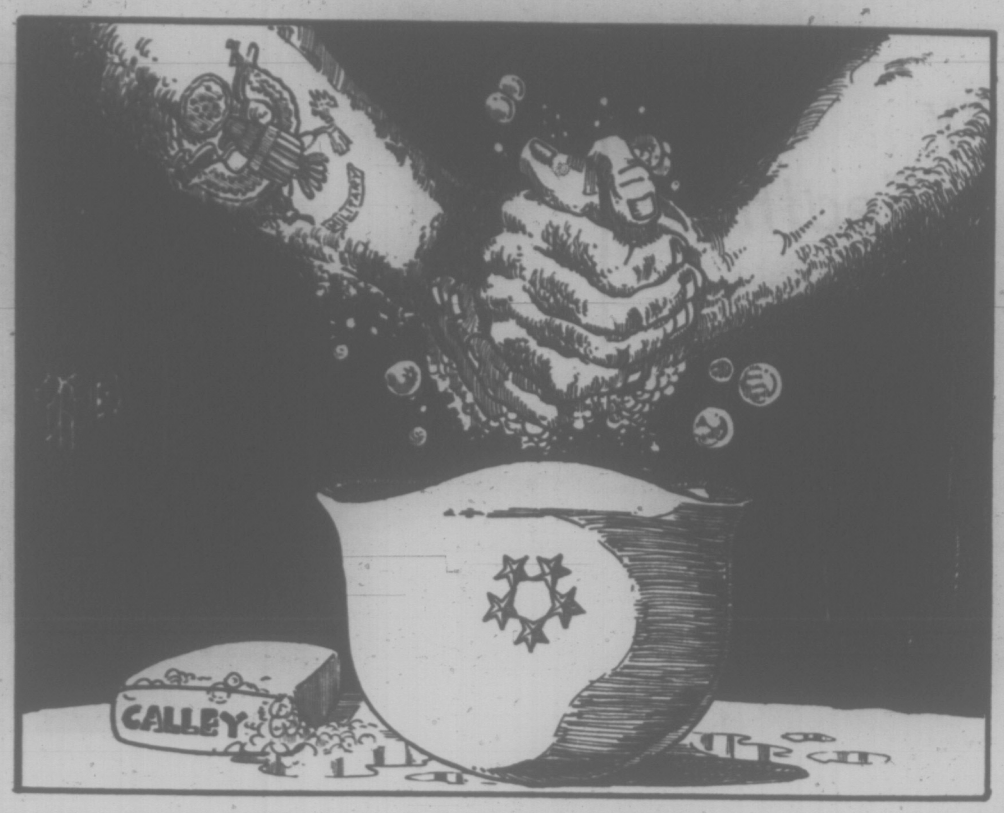
This is a complicated form of financial snooker. You bank your cue ball off the far cushion to strike another ball that kisses the target ball into the near pocket. Good shooting, if you can pull it off.

Economic Base

MR. LEWIS MUMFORD, THE American social critic, recently referred to the need to develop the concept of a "new economy" which will emphasize not "power, productivity, and pecuniary enrichment" but rather "well-distributed plenitude and the general enrichment of culture."

Behind Mr. Mumford's veiled generalities there shines a term which is often in the Canadian political air — "quality of life." This quest for quality of life must sooner or later take a turn towards tangible satisfaction, which would be as much in our religious tradition as our political.

When that turn comes there will have to be people able to direct vague cultural and artistic longings into economic channels. Mr. Mumford's "new economy" and our "quality of life" debate are as complementary as air and water.



$3 Dollar

Globe and Mail

When one of Canada's provinces celebrates its centennial, pomp, pageantry, and all manner of commemorative symbolism are in order. As a matter of principle, the striking of a special coin fits comfortably into the general sense of occasion. Why then should we feel uneasy and faintly embarrassed when the Canadian Mint gets into the act?

The answer is that the Mint has a history of clumsiness when it comes to special coin issues, and there is no particular reason to suppose things will come out any better with the Centennial dollar issued this year to mark British Columbia's entry into Confederation. Almost instinctively, one wonders which dealers will scoop up this opportunity.

This is undoubtedly a dollar, but because it is in mint and uncirculated condition it will cost $3 to buy one. The mint itself thus applies the first layer of artificiality to the whole business. The coin will never sell for less than $3; how much more it will be worth is uncertain but the Mint — at the peak of its inflationary form — used to be able to ensure an extremely rapid appreciation of special coin values.

Can we really go on using the three-dollar bill in our language as the symbol of oddity in currency when the three-dollar dollar enjoys official sanction?

We are not sure at this stage exactly how the Mint will go about defeating the purpose of issuing a popular memento, but we are confident it will.

A Few Carefree Millions for Youth Tourists

THE GOVERNMENT'S new strength-through-joy program announced by the prime minister and Mr. Pelletier should please everyone except disgruntled taxpayers answering their annual summons from National Revenue. It had been obvious for months that the government, struggling with one unemployment problem, will be confronted with another as the universities and colleges empty this spring. Much in the new program will be generally accepted as necessary.

Western

In the past two years, however, the government had drifted into the acceptance of a philosophy which is new and startling, given the limitations of the public treasury. This emerges at several points in Mr. Trudeau's latest statement. Thus:

"The advantages of summer employment are so obvious, however, in terms of self-support, of broadening of outlook, of acquisition of new skills and experience, that every effort to assist on the part of governments and business is justified.

"There is equal justification for assistance to students who do not seek work but who are nevertheless desirous of occupying their summer vacations in an otherwise rewarding and worthwhile fashion."

Equal justification?

Again: "I should like now to turn to the other portion of the federal government program; that part which assists students in non-employment activities. Some effort should be made by both government and non-governmental organizations to assist those students not wishing to work or not able to work to gain from their summer activities, be these in the form of travel, study or voluntary occupations . . ."

No one denies the value of travel. This is not a new discovery. Herodotus lauded it; a point made last year in one of Mr. Pelletier's pamphlets. Even in the depression many students made their way to Europe; often travelling as nursemaids on cattle boats. But government had not at that time become the great patron of travellers "not wishing to work."

Context

What is the context of the new programs? The estimate is that more than 1,800,000 university and high school students will be released from studies in the coming month. This is an increase of 100,000 over 1970. Large numbers of them will be seeking summer jobs in order that they will have the means to continue their courses in the fall.

Obviously, this is going to mean great pressure on the funds available to government. It had been decided that $57,800,000 can be spared for youth programs. This is a large sum (rather more than the estimated cost of railway subsidies or of Canada Manpower Services). Even so there is a general expectation that many students will have difficulty in finding jobs.

Of the $21 million available for Mr. Pelletier's four programs, however, $6 million will be deducted for purposes which will not generate employment. On the "equal justification" theory, $3,775,000 is being set aside for group travel — at home and also abroad. Another $1,153,000 will go for transient amenities and $1,500,000 for language training.

This appears to mean that education through travel, for those fortunate enough to qualify, will be at the expense of formal education. But the government in recent years had placed overwhelming emphasis on formal education. It has encouraged everyone to regard university practically as a right; it has poured out hundreds of millions in programs of post-secondary education which at times have broken through budgetary control. It has imposed such demands on universities that serious questions have lately been posed as to the capacity of the country to sustain expansion at current rates.

Should government be the universal provider? When it is thus limited financially, should it accept the responsibility of catering to student tourist needs? Many of those who do not wish to work are probably in fortunate positions, having some assurance that funds will be forthcoming to see them through the next university year. Why then should they enjoy subdidized travel at the taxpayer's expense?

The government, now and again, has attacks of caution. While it intends to provide as many jobs as possible within the civil service, it seeks to avoid "make-work activities which contribute little to the national well-being either now or in the future." This is sensible. But it discards caution when it gets into the field of organized play, the benefits of which are at best marginal when compared to those which the government itself has seen in higher education.

If Economy Revives

What is to happen if the economy has so revived by next year that jobs are plentiful and the pressure on government has lightened? Since there is "equal justification" for spending on those who do not seek work, will Mr. Pelletier be able to claim another $57.8 million; practically all of which could then be dedicated to carefree jaunts through Europe?

Modern government seems to have learned from the ancient Romans that much goodwill can be garnered by providing circuses for the multitude. Except, as it sometimes appears, for those in actual need, there is something under the big tent for everyone.

The difference is that the Romans managed to charge others for their spectacles. In these more enlightened days, the bill goes to the Canadian taxpayer — without whose unfailing assistance the show could not go on.

Correspondence From Our Readers

Bomb-Test Fallout

On January 8, 1971, John Mika of your Ottawa bureau reported on Canadian checks of A-bomb fallout from an underground test in Nevada on December 18, 1970. He quoted Dr. A. H. Booth, head of Radiation Protection Division (in Ottawa) to the effect that "early warning" systems of continuous air sampling "confirmed no detectable radiation had come across the border through the air."

I have just received a U.S. map of integrated Iodine 131 density in air following this test that leads me to believe there was probably between .5 and 1 microcuries per second per cubic meter across the U.S.-Canadian border.

Since I 131 is the major health hazard of short-lived fallout, I suspect that the Canadian measurements were, and most likely are, inadequate in this case.

If our test ban treaty is to be meaningful, I believe Nevada tests should be stopped before our cows get out to pasture and Iodine 131 gets into children's thyroids without our even being aware that they have been subjected to an unnecessary risk of thyroid cancer. —Norman E. Polster, Argenta, B.C.

No Church Bus

We have been faced by the astonishing news that in a perhaps more than average church-going city such as this, according to the new time table of the transit system no allowance has been made for the fact that so many of the citizens use the buses to attend the mid-morning church service!

The bus drivers must be aware of this if the hydro hierarchy are not affected. Who is responsible for the new time table?

Is this company totally unrelated to anything but business? Even to those of us who are compelled to concede the dominance of the city office building as compared to the spire, some recognition of other values might be permitted.—F. E. Lawrence, 239 Beechwood.

Noisy Mufflers

This is a suggestion to Victorians who are fed up with wide open mufflers or exhausts that split the air with noise because the infants behind the wheel are trying to prove their masculinity.

A municipal law has been on the books for years but not enforced by the local police because it's not worth bothering about. I checked with the police. Apparently they have not heard of noise pollution!

If you wish to complain, take the licence number, appearance of the driver (as it may not be the owner driving the car), the day and hour.

Make your complaint to the police and be prepared to take time off work, if necessary, to follow your complaint. Otherwise the police will not press charges but will call on the culprits and suggest they be good boys and get whatever fixed. There may or may not be a follow-up.

Basically the onus is on the automotive and motorcycle manufacturers that deliberately make loud motors, etc. With their hundreds of thousands of dollars for lobbying nothing will be done for years yet in the areas of noise and pollution. — (Miss) Maggi Lynn, 548 Niagara.

Who Has the Right?

I read with interest, Arthur Mayse's column of Friday, March 12. In his first sentence he refers to the movie "Dr. Zhivago" as "a bowl of mush if ever there was one." Then he went on to rave about what a great movie "Ryan's Daughter" is. This really intrigued me because the following day, Peter McNelly, in "A Film Review" accuses "Ryan's Daughter" of being a "fat and dull movie, 90 minutes too long and riddled with cheap tricks — a million-dollar soap opera."

The conclusion I draw is that no two people can view literature, or for that matter, life, with the same attitudes. This brings me to my complaint: the Academy Awards — a farce beyond belief. What gives this institution, the "Academy" as it is referred to, the right to pass such exclusive judgment on any film, is unknown to me! Every April people everywhere are subjected to this disgraceful television spectacular. The Academy, an unknown group of people, bestows honors and bronze upon the people of the acting profession. True, some members of the acting profession deserve praise, and this is where it should end. But why this ridiculous categorizing such as an award for best this, best that and first this and second that? I appreciate the music of the Beatles, although many people do not. Who has the right to say their music is good, bad or otherwise?—Tom Wood, 3127 Irma.

Centennial Spirit?

Is the withholding of the money contributed in faith by the retired teachers of B.C. for a half-decent pension one of the ways in which this 1971 session of the legislature intends to celebrate the centennial of the entry of the province into Confederation?

Does this discrimination against one group of its senior citizens show the true colors of the present government?

No doubt the retired teachers would agree with Mr. Williston that there should be no further drain on the above-mentioned funds.

Perhaps more of the retired teachers should have followed the example of Mr. Williston and left the profession in favor of the more lucrative field of politics.—Louise M. Iverson, retired from Greater Victoria School District No. 61.

Breakwater Protest

It is understood that the Royal Victoria Yacht Club is now proposing to build a stone breakwater in Cadboro Bay extending into Loon Bay. This project is to cost twice the amount of the original one of wooden piles and therefore necessitate more members, which means more yachts, more traffic, much more pollution and the curtailment of the enjoyment of the many people who enjoy the park and the beach at Loon Bay.

There is still time to preserve one of the most beautiful districts in Victoria by writing letters of protest to the Mayor of Oak Bay, to the Minister of Transport the Honorable D. Jamieson in Ottawa and to Mr. David Anderson, MP, Ottawa. —Mrs. A. F. Nation, 3280 Beach.

Remember How We Beat Those Tough Years?

By ALAN BRIEN
New Statesman

PALO ALTO, Calif — The silent majority may never have been silent. It was just that the noisy minority were not listening.

They didn't even listen to each other most of the time. They were too busy waiting their turn to gossip about the good old days.

The drug that kept them going in bars and bowling alleys, on park benches and stadium bleachers, has now been commercialised, gift-wrapped and delivered to the door. Just add alcohol and serve.

It's called nostalgia, and, waddyaknow, it doesn't work on anybody under the age of 35.

At last, the middle-aged middle-brows of Middle America have a topic of conversation on which the kids can't say anything worth a damn — what life was like before the new generation was born.

The stuff is peddled everywhere today. A typical advertisement runs: "Tired of smog . . . traffic jams . . . repairmen who don't fix it right . . . typists who don't spell it right . . stores that deliver the dress you didn't order? We have no solutions. All we can do is take you back to a saner, better world. You had your tough years (you conquered them,) now you are entitled to remember them with a little honest satisfaction!"

For just a dollar, you get a book full of color photographs, posters, strip cartoons, called 'Remember When', with a monthly newsletter, Reminiscing Time, followed by an endless flow of discs and albums renewing your acquaintance, in sound and picture, with Mae West, Dizzy Dean, and brother Daffy, Wee Bonnie Baker, Fibber McGee, Slim and Slam, the Ritz Brothers, Two-Ton Tony Galento, Aimee Semple McPherson.

Two names which crop up regularly are Busby Berkeley and Ruby Keeler, a pair who are alive and hoofing and pocketing a percentage of the gross from the latest hit of the theatrical season — would you believe No, No, Nanette?

Broadway playgoers of today are the moviegoers of 20 years ago. Looking over the lists of show successes, what do the following have in common: My Fair Lady, Camelot, Gypsy, A Funny Thing Happened on the Way to the Forum, Fiorello, She Loves Me, Hello Dolly, Fiddler on the Roof and Cabaret?

Not one is set in the present time. Stars forgotten in Hollywood, such as Betty Grable, Ginger Rogers, Rudy Vallee, still shine undimmed on the New York stage.

The nostalgia, whether on stage or in print, seems to be for the past simply because it is past. The golden years always appear to turn tarnished around 1942, just when America dragged itself out of a world slump by staggering into world war. Last week's Time magazine even contains a signed essay, 'The Uses of Economic Adversity', which argues that a recession can be good for you.

Think of the advantages. Life is more exciting now that the element of risk is restored to an economy grown lazy and over-weight. Young people will have more important things to worry about — like keeping alive — than protest marches and utopian political dreams.

Parents will have good excuse for refusing to support non-working dropout children. The authority of employers and teachers will be strengthened.

All in all, the recession has already restored 'a certain sense of realism'. It is difficult to imagine how America has survived the last decade without this marvellous device.

Memo from Nixon to Heath: every nation should have one. Could it be that somebody up there in the Time-Life Building is rationalising his own fears about the future of this once impregnable publishing empire as the chill winds of a local economy drive whistle through the corridors, freezing the expense accounts, shrinkng the circulation figures?

A further nine pages under the headline 'The Cooling of America', allege that an uncanny passivity has gripped the nation. All is quiet on the student front. The revolutionaries and the rioters have demobbed themselves and gone underground to rethink their tactics. 'A mood approaching quiet has fallen like a deep snow.'

It is a rash prophecy to make in winter, when the political activists traditionally hibernate, and it may leave Time's crystalball indecently exposed when the real snows melt, revealing the embattled armies still itching to start the spring offensive.

Broadcasting at Dead End

By DOUGLAS FISHER

There's something odd afoot in broadcasting and/or communications.

You can almost smell trouble.

In the 2 weeks since the Canadian Radio-Television Commission published its paper on "the integration of cable television in the Canadian broadcasting system" there has been an unnatural quiet.

Why? It's a poor paper: Confused, confusing, murky, meandering, imprecise — a grab-bag of points and arguments about television.

All Quiet

You wonder why no one has said: This is bad. This is a field where everyone tends to sound off. Not even ACTRA, not even Ben Nobleman, has sounded off yet on this guide for discussion.

Even more surprising, no one in politics has been pressing Eric Kierans, the minister of communications. What are his brains-trusters and taskforcers projecting for cablevision in that "wired city" of his?

It is well over two years since the CRTC began sounding off bravely about the future direction of broadcasting. Now it is back at a starting gate, but no one knows where the track is.

You admire Pierre Juneau? You like Harry Boyle? You believe the CRTC has intregrity, independence and some guts — a quality so absent in its BBG predecessor? You think I'm taking a cheap shot at the commission? You won't if you puzzle your way through its guide to a national discussion on cablevision.

Let's turn back to Eric Kierans. Can you remember the trumpets sounding when he was installed as the brand-new minister of communications? Mr. Kierans proclaimed the giant strides Canada would take, ahead of any other country, into the 21st century. Wasn't McLuhan, the world's greatest communications theologian, a Canadian?

Mr. Trudeau and his courtiers were smug and very certain. The "plugged-in" Prime Minister was merely plugging the whole country into the future.

This, above all, was to be a government which communicated! So far, we have had Information Canada and a strange, strange silence from the department of communications.

A few weeks ago, I noted that Mr. Kierans had returned from a winter holiday. I prodded an MP friend (in opposition) to ask Mr. Kierans some questions about his "wired city"

The MP replied like this: "Why bother the poor devil? He's just a ghost. If there's a totem pole for that cabinet, Eric is underneath it. He's not going anywhere; neither is his department. Why bother him? Nobody else is."

Marking Time

No one has probed at Mr. Kierans for months. Everyone takes as read that he counts for nothing — in the cabinet, with the PM, in the caucus. The assumption is that his department responsibilities were framed in the golden days of brain-storming, before the structural and equilibrium obsessions of Mr. Trudeau came to the fore.

Rumors are that Mr. Kierans is marking time, waiting for an election to let him depart quietly; that the communications department is likely to go the way of past brain-storms like the department of forestry and the department of industry.

Mr. Kierans is very low-profile in Ottawa. Yet he is a bright man of strong views. His ministry should have the most to say in determining cablevision policy. A month ago, Mr. Kierans gave a little-noted speech in Vancouver on the outlook and alternatives in Canadian communications.

Groping Blindly

Although this speech is more lucid than the CRTC cablevision paper, it shares the same sense of feeling-along-a-path-blindly. Mr Kierans is more sure than the CRTC how things should develop but, like the commission, he doesn't sound like a policy-maker. It's as though no one is listening to him — at the top, in the cabinet, in the caucus, in the CRTC.

Here are a string of quotes from Mr. Kierans' speech. After reading them, reflect that the CRTC seems to want to keep the organization of cablevision operations small and local with a do-it-yourself emphasis on programming: it somehow wants revenue transferred from a multitude of cable companies to broadcasting stations but it has no workable system in mind for such a feat in taxation and transfer payments.

The CRTC wants to protect the private investments already made in both conventional broadcasting and cablevision.

Mr. Kierans said these things:

"We can do something about the future if we choose to . . . in telecommunications, but also in those social and economic activities offered by and dependent on communications . . . the base is telephony as it now exists . . . every developed nation in the world today is paying special attention to and devising special national policies to assure that in this vital sphere of information and communication it can reserve for itself the profits and manage the consequences. How do we get there?

"The question is how fast and whether Canadians will fashion this society to their tastes, their needs and their pockets, or have one imposed on them, ready to wear.

". . . We might say we do not like things big in this big world and take steps to encourage the proliferation of small, autonomous, Canadian-owned industries doing their own research and development . . . in terms of international competition, Canada would be a pastoral economy.

"We can do it if we rationalize and manage the resources which are just sufficient to meet the challenge . . . Consolidation means co-ordination, committees, conventions, government intervention.

"The handicap of medium size in industry has escaped many Canadians because we are accustomed to seeing relatively small and numerous firms in secondary industry, without much awareness or allowance for the fact that these firms are part and parcel of very large entities based elsewhere.

"Only a few large Canadian-owned corporations, based mainly on our resources, have survived and they stand out visibly for Canadians to see. It is common, thus, for Canadians to be tolerant of very big corporations which do not belong to them and to have misgivings about their own.

Boring a Hole

". . . I doubt that we are going to be able to afford many new classes of communications networks and extensive fragmentation within these — computer networks, educational networks, broadcast cable networks, telephone, telegraphy, video, and so on networks — each of them running a cable and boring a hole through the subscriber's building. This is again the kind of uneconomic fragmentation which invites collapse or sellout at the worst, or unacceptably high cost to the consumer at best."

Surely there's a glaring message in that for the CRTC, even if Mr. Kierans doesn't count, even if the MPs on the Hill have forgotten about the consumer of broadcasting.

'Controlled Fusion' Power Suffers Another Setback

By WALTER SULLIVAN

Controlled fusion — the taming of the reaction in a hydrogen bomb — seems to be on the horizon. It is now clear, in the words of two scientists of the U.S. Atomic Energy Commission, that no "laws of nature" stand in the way.

But a survey of the field has shown that formidable difficulties remain, not the least of which has been the decision of the Nixon administration to reduce slightly federal investment in fusion research.

The reduction, by some $400,000 in a total fusion budget of $28 million, comes at a time when the work is handicapped by inflating costs and when a stage has been reached when, it is believed, larger and more costly devices must be built for further progress.

Recent experiments on medium-scale devices have led to considerable optimism, but it is still not certain that the reactions will run the same way on a scale large enough for economic production of electric power.

In fusion reactions light atoms (such as those of hydrogen) are combined to form heavier ones. As in fission — the splitting of heavy atoms, such as uranium — a small residue of matter is converted to energy. However, the fission process, which drives all of today's atomic power plants, is "dirty" in that it manufactures a variety of radioactive by-products.

Fusion is "clean." Its various processes either produce no radioactive material at all, or involve tritium, which most specialists believe can be recycled through the system without significant hazard. Since fusion would use, as fuel, forms of hydrogen derived from sea water, it would provide virtually unlimited energy.

Some conservationists, fearful that the proliferation of fission-type power plants will increase the risk that radioactive material is accidentally released, are urging that the increased federal investment in new fission reactors be diverted to the fusion program.

The new fission reactors will be of the breeder type that manufacture fuel as they burn it. At least some leaders in fusion research, notably Dr. Melvin B. Gottlieb of Princeton University, believe any such diversion of funds would be dangerous.

He pointed out in a recent interview that fusion power could not come into general use until long after the anticipated engrgy shortages of the next two decades. It is to meet those shortages that the Administration is pushing the development of breeder reactors.

Gottlieb heads the Plasma Physics Laboratory operated at Princeton for the AEC. It was there, 20 years ago, that the American effort to control the fusion reaction began. He believes the first clear-cut demonstration that one of the experimental fusion designs is feasible will come in the 1970s.

A limited amount of fusion has taken place in such devices, but they did not come very close to the break-even point, where energy production equalled that consumed in the process.

Once "scientific feasibility" has been demonstrated, Gottlieb said, it will probably take at least 15 years to work out and test engineering details for a fullfledged demonstration plant. Such a plant would be of moderate size, compared to the giants envisioned when fusion comes into its own.

It is widely suspected that, to be economical, fusion plants will have to be larger than the biggest atomic plants of today, generating as much as 5,000 megawatts. This is comparable to the two great Soviet hydroelectric plants at Bratsk and Krasnoyarsk.

Don't You Believe It!

By RUSSELL BAKER

Very few of us, probably, ever think of the mendacity discount rate. It is the percentage — which we all instinctively know — by which we instinctively mark down the true value of this ad's claims for a given toothpaste, that politician's claim to have the new miracle answer, this newspaper columnist's claims to wisdom, and so forth.

In brief, we have all learned the wisdom of P. T. Barnum, finally. We realize now that those suckers who were being born every minute were us, and we conclude that the world is full of slickers out to take us. And so, being not dumb for the most part, even if we are suckers, we have evolved protective devices. One is the mendacity discount rate, or M.D.R.

We are all accustomed to using the M.D.R. to evaluate advertising. No one of whole wit believes, for example, that a socially dim and failing person can, by purchasing a new mouthwash, become a social success. On encountering the many advertisements suggesting that a new gargle will turn this magical trick, we automatically, without an instant of conscious thought, consult the mendacity discount rate, find that all advertising claims of this sort contain 95 per cent mendacity, and discount accordingly.

An interesting aspect of this reflexive process is that the M.D.R. also measures how much mendacity, con, tripe, baloney, hot air, etcetera, we will tolerate with utter placidity. "In this field," we say to ourselves, "up to 95 per cent lies are permitted before the rules are violated."

Now, the problem about mass acceptance of permissible levels of lying in inflation. To illustrate, let us stay with mouthwash. A generation ago, consumers discounted the typical mouthwash claim at an M.D.R. of roughly 30 per cent. (There are no printed M.D.R. tables, unfortunately. These are kept only in the mind, and memory is also subject to heavy discount.)

In the intervening years, as we became more insured to extravagance in advertising claims, particularly on ads for mouthwash and other cleaning agents, the M.D.R. rose steeply. The ad men were forced to adjust.

* * *

"If people disbelieve 95 per cent of what we tell them, we will have to tell them something absolutely fantastically outrageous to get them to believe that there is anything whatever to recommend our mouthwash," they told themselves. Hence, the ad claims that a change of gargle will mate a wallflower with the most desirable man in middle America. After discounting all that as malarkey, the consumer might be left with a small residue of conviction. "Maybe," he might conclude, "the stuff will at least leave a better taste in my mouth."

This inflation of the M.D.R. leads to impossible relationships between the parties involved. As we tolerantly assume that mendacity is increasing at a prodigious rate, the seller is forced to make ever more extravagant claims if he is to have any sales argument left over after the discount rate is applied. Here is rampant inflation of corrupting social values.

In the past few years we have had an unhappy demonstration of how the inflation of the M.D.R. has corrupted our public life. The assumption that politicians lie wantonly in political campaigns has, of course, been so widely accepted for so long that it is a mark of one's naivete to complain about it. Anyone who accepts campaign talk at its face value, goes the tolerated view of politics, deserves the gulling he will inevitably get.

While we have traditionally kept the M.D.R. very high for political campaigning, we have until recently been reluctant to allow any M.D.R. at all for our governors once the campaign has ended. Always in the past, we operated on the assumption that after we had sorted out those liars and sent the decent ones to high office they would prove the excellence of our ability to judge men by leveling with us.

Lately, however, we have had these alarming polls showing a spiraling rise in the M.D.R. for the government. The latest, a Gallup survey, suggests that seven out of ten Americans believe the administration is not telling them the full truth about the Indochina war.

* * *

The Nixon administration is understandably depressed. A high M.D.R. for government helped depose President Johnson. Nixon's men determined to get it down. They have worked very hard, indeed, at not lying, and yet the M.D.R. is rising faster than the cost of living. Why? Perhaps because they have played the lawyer's game too well, pointing out — with strict accuracy — that those who feel deceived in Indochina simply didn't read the fine print. Americans have never trusted lawyers; lawyers are almost always on the side of the rich.

An alternate explanation for the rising M.D.R. is more alarming for what it suggests about where we are headed. Maybe we have become so accustomed to accepting mendacity as a normal condition of life that we assume it is natural for everybody to lie to us, even our best men.

B.C. Moves to Manage Water Resources

By PETER McNELLY

The government introduced legislative proposals Thursday which define British Columbia's constitutional ability to manage water resources within the province.

The proposals are detailed in provisions of a new bill, the Water Resources Act. Resources Minister Ray Williston said the government does not intend to take the bill beyond first reading this year.

●

He told reporters during a press conference outside the house the bill is intended to provoke discussion within the province and with the federal government in order to clarify B.C.'s constitutional powers to manage water resources.

"It is absolutely fundamental that the province indicates the position that has been assigned to it under the BNA Act," Williston said.

He admitted the bill had been produced quickly to counter Ottawa's move into the water management field under the Canada Water Act.

"If we don't occupy the zone here, indirectly, they will."

Williston said the bill has been written in a deliberate attempt to provoke controversy.

"We've thrown in there everything and the kitchen sink. And frankly, some of the items have been put there to generate interest."

'We Want to Provoke Debate' — Williston

The act would give the government absolute power over water management within the province. It's provisions go as far as to require anyone who wants to drill a well to obtain a permit.

●

The government has proposed to give itself the power to expropriate any lands necessary for the purposes of water management.

The government further would be empowered to construct any form of resource and watershed projects and would be able to enter into agreements with any government, persons, municipalities or improvement districts to build these facilities.

It would be able to construct water and sewage works for new towns, and provide financial assistance to any group or body for development of conservation and environmental quality programs.

The government further would be able to take any emergency steps necessary to relieve flood-damaged areas.

Municipalities and corporations would not be able to construct, extend or alter water supply systems without a government permit.

Without consent or compensation, the government would have the power to lay and pipes or sewers "in, upon, through, over and under a highway or road under the jurisdiction of a public authority."

The other major section of the bill gives the government complete control over water resource planning.

It would be able to conduct water resource and ecological surveys, construct and operate hydrological and meterological observation stations, take watershed inventory and conservation studies, and determine minimum water flows in streams.

Not only the Canada Water Act, but other federal moves have prompted the provincial bill, Williston said.

●

He mentioned last year's water shortage problem in Goldstream where the issue was whether to retain water for domestic use or spill some if it into the stream for spawning salmon.

"In the fall, the federal government decided that a certain amount had to be released," Williston said.

This may not seem important, he said, but it represented a federal act upon the management of provincial waters.

This, and another situation in Vernon, Williston said, are without precedent. In Vernon, Ottawa has ordered a group of farmers to release for fishing purposes, water in an irrigation dam the farmers had built themselves.

He cited these instances as only two examples of Ottawa's interest in management of provincial water resources. Other areas include pollution control, he said, and federal jurisdiction over fishing and navigable waterways.

Williston denied that the bill prepares for the export of water to the United States. When asked why the government did not produce a white paper instead of a bill, Williston said it preferred to present specific proposals rather than general ones.

Though the bill will not be discussed in the legislature, Williston said it is possible public hearings will be conducted by the cabinet's environmental and land use committee.

This would depend on the extent of public interest, he said.

All provincial water districts will receive copies of the bill and will be invited to make submissions to the government.

The bill would bring the government into the management of water resources much in the manner that it now manages forests and lands.

Williston said existing legislation relates to the licensing and use of water for domestic, agricultural and fishing purposes. It is a major development for the province to define its power to treat water as a resource, Williston said.

LAKES WIN SUPPORT

The Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association solidly supports a province-wide campaign to include three major lakes in the west coast national park.

The 78 members who attended an association meeting Thursday all signed a petition requesting that the area known as the Kitinat triangle between Bamfield and Port Renfrew, be included in the park.

This would include Tsusiat, Squalicum and Hobiton Lakes — the three last major unspoilt lakes on southern Vancouver Island.

Parks Pushed For City Area

The immediate need for development of park facilities in unorganized areas of the Capital Region Thursday was stressed by Cliff Bates, city parks administrator, at a meeting of the Thetis Park Nature Sanctuary Association.

Bates said the biggest concern of park authorities is to provide sufficient recreational facilities for the region's expanding population.

"People problems will increase as Greater Victoria grows," he said. "We will have to either provide additional facilities or limit the number of people in our parks in order to provide quality experience."

"If the four core municipalities of Esquimalt, Saanich, Oak Bay and Victoria are to be relieved of people overload, development of park facilities in unorganized areas and rural areas must proceed now — within the next five years," he added.

Bates said rising costs of providing beautification in Beacon Hill Park and the downtown areas will have to be helped met by the regional population.

"No one city the size of Victoria can provide staff and funds for expanding park use and demand," he said.

The 1970 budget for Beacon Hill park was $173,750 and downtown beautification $50,000.

Bates replied the city is doing all it can to preserve the species which is unique to south Vancouver Island.

STILL ON WILLISTON ESTIMATES

Tempers Short as Debate Drags On

By BRUCE YEMEN

The legislature sat until 12:45 a.m. today and was scheduled to continued plowing through the $60 million estimates of the lands, forests and water resources departments this afternoon for the third consecutive day.

The house adjourned with one vote remaining in the forest service spending estimates, about an hour after an outbreak of bitterness over the length of the night sitting.

The New Democrats tried twice to adjourn the sitting before midnight and were defeated each time.

At one point as the debate dragged on, an angry Resources Minister Ray Williston told Bob Williams (NDP—Vancouver East) he should "get out and stay out" of the legislature.

Williams had called the domination of an advisory coastal scaling committee by forest industry representatives similar to having a police commission dominated by "Lucky Luciano."

Williston made his "get out and stay out" remark in defending the civil servants on the committee against any comparison with Lucky Luciano.

Williams replied that he wasn't referring to the civil servants on the committee.

WHERE'S BENNETT?

When Opposition Leader Dave Barrett tried to adjourn the house, saying some members had attended a morning committee meeting and had another one today, he said it was time for Premier Bennett to "get out of bed."

Bennett had been absent from the house most of the evening.

Barrett and Attorney-General Leslie Peterson traded insults as the legislature waited for Bennett to return for the vote.

At another point, Bill Hartley (NDP—Yale-Lillooet) accused Rehabilitation Minister Phil Gaglardi of having told a "deliberate lie" to the house earlier in the session in connection with a statement about a telegram Gaglardi said he received from the community of Lytton.

Hartley said he had challenged Gaglardi to table the telegram and he hadn't.

He refused to withdraw the "deliberate lie" statement in its entirety for several minutes, but finally accepted chairman Herb Bruch's advice to withdraw it. Gaglardi, who was dozing in the chamber as the evening wore on, had demanded a retraction.

Williston received his salary vote about 10 p.m. after being grilled for 10 hours.

He sipped tea and ginger ale and ate a piece of apple pie in the chamber during the latter part of the evening.

GETTING TIRED

Leo Nimsock (NDP—Kootenay) appealed to Bennett to adjourn the debate because Williston, he said, must be getting tired.

The entire water resources service estimates, including the pollution control branch, remain to be approved.

Black Director

DETROIT (AP) — General Motors Corp. has announced the appointment of a second black man to a high-ranking corporate position. The firm announced that Abraham S. Venable, director of the office of minority business enterprise in the U.S. Commerce Department, will become GM's director of urban affairs May 1. Late last year, the G.M. board of directors elected Rev. Dr. Leon Sullivan of Philadelphia as the firm's first black director.

Gunderson Paid $27,500

Einar M. Gunderson got paid $27,500 for working "practically full-time" as a director and member of the executive management committee of B.C. Hydro and Power Authority, Premier Bennett reported Thursday.

The information was filed in the legislature by Bennett in reply to a written question from Robert Strachan (NDP — Cowichan-Malahat.)

Bennett also reported that Gunderson's $4,132 in expenses received during the year ended March 31, 1970, included three conferences in eastern Canada including two federal-provincial conferences in Ottawa.

Total expense for the three Eastern trips was $1,752 while Gunderson's in-province expenses totalled $2,380 including $704 for a club membership. Bennett reported that payment of such club dues for Hydro officials has since been discontinued.

Latest Nudie

SST Project's Foot in Grave

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — The United States appeared today close to killing its supersonic airliner, although the Nixon administration and the plane's supporters clung to hopes that the Senate will rescue it.

Shock and incredulity were the dominant reactions of SST backers after the House of Representatives dramatically turned its back on the plane Thursday, reversing the stand it took last year.

SENATE BATTLE

The House voted 215 to 204 against the government's request for $134 million to keep the Boeing prototype program going until June 30.

The battle in the Senate will be joined behind closed doors today in the Senate appropriations committee.

The Senate voted 52 to 41 against the SST Dec. 3, but 10 new members have been elected since then.

The government already has poured $864 million into the plane.

SPUR ECONOMY

The Nixon administration contends an American SST is necessary to continue U.S. dominance of world aviation, since the Soviet Union, Britain and France are building their own versions. SST development would create thousands of jobs and spur the lagging economy, backers say.

Opponents said a fleet of noisy, high-flying, faster-than-sound planes could adversely affect the climate, and might cause an increase in skin cancer cases by disrupting the earth's ozone band which filters ultraviolet rays.

Talk Money For Jobs, Youth Told

Students may get the chance to work at low pay rates for Victoria city hall if they can negotiate the pay issue with public service unions.

Victoria council's finance committee Thursday appeared none too hopeful, however, about meeting the request made this week by a student organized Share the Work Committee.

Mayor Courtney Haddock said the matter was Ottawa's responsibility.

"I think the federal government has got to work with the business sector" to produce jobs for students, he said. He said the "$15 million" the federal government has put into student summer work wouldn't go very far, but was told the amount is $57 million.

The committee was told the public employee unions had not allowed students to work at lower-than-scale pay rates in the past, but a letter will be written to the students, suggesting that they try to negotiate an arrangement with the Canadian Union of Public Employees.

PLUNGE DEATH ENDS SIXTH-FLOOR SCUFFLE

TORONTO (CP) — Two scuffling youths broke through a sixth-floor window at Rochdale College Thursday night and one was killed when they hit the ground.

The other was reported in serious condition after an operation.

Kevin Kerick Yallop, 17, was killed. Wolfe Glazier, 18, has two broken legs, internal injuries and cuts. Both are from Toronto.

GLASS BROKE

Police said they were told the pair scuffled in the sixth-floor lobby outside the elevators. When they lunged against a plate-glass window the glass broke and both pitched out, apparently landing together in a shower of glass.

The fall and survival is not a first for the five-year-old, student-run, co-operative college in midtown Toronto.

BROKE LEGS

In February, 1969, Donald Waldorf of Ottawa, then 18, fell from a sixth-floor window and broke both legs, his nose and an arm. He had been sitting on the window ledge.

Police said they had not been able to ascertain the reason for the scuffle between Yallop and Glazier.

The college has been the centre of controversy almost since it was opened. Police have raided it frequently in their campaign against drugs.

Abortions Jump

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — For every five live births in Oregon in 1970, there was one therapeutic abortion. That ratio — 200.8 abortions to every 1,000 live births — was released by the Oregon board of health.

Prisoners Sought

AGASSIZ (CP) — Three prisoners — Jacob Kuspren, 34, Lawson Dunsmuir, 39, and William Frederick Henn, 45 — failed to return to Mountain Prison near here after being allowed out on temporary three-day passes.

Tunnel Favored

VANCOUVER (CP) — Representatives of Vancouver and North Shore communities have agreed that the proposed third crossing of Burrard Inlet should be a tunnel rather than a bridge, Mayor Tom Campbell said Thursday.

He said city council approval for a tunnel under Vancouver Harbor would be subject 'to the provincial government increasing to $41 million from $27 million its contribution to a crossing.

Referendum Defeated

TRAIL (CP) — A $43,000 referendum to pay for the first four months of kindergarten operation in Trail school district was defeated by ratepayers Thursday. Only 31.5 per cent of those who voted were in favor of the referendum, which required 60-per-cent approval.

Credit for Driving

EDMONTON (CP) — Driver education should be available as an optional credit course in Grade 10 in the next school year, Education Minister Robert Clark announced in the legislature Thursday.

To be worth two credits, the course will be the responsibility of the teacher in the classroom although a sizeable portion will include actual experience in an automobile.

Injunction Granted

WINNIPEG (CP) — The Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Co. Ltd. of Flin Flon has been granted an injunction barring pickets from obstructing roads to the plant or trespassing on company property.

The restraining order was granted Thursday by Mr. Justice Roy Matas in Manitoba Court of Queen's Bench.

The injunction does not stop the six unions from picketing outside company property, provided there is no interference with traffic or pedestrians.

Hippies Explained

CALGARY (CP) — The Protestant reformation and the hippie movement were both inspired by the abuse of power and immorality in the elite of a decadent society, Los Angeles anthropologist Dr. Walter Goldschmidt said Thursday.

"Also, they both followed major changes in the communications media and both came at the heels of major technological changes.

"The major difference between the two is the hippie movement's lack of a formal leadership, a definite policy and a manifesto of its beliefs."

Seepage Charged

EDMONTON (CP) — The president of the Northwest Territories Indian Brotherhood has charged that an Imperial Oil Co. pipeline at Norman Wells is leaking oil into the Mackenzie River.

James Washie said Thursday the oil has been "seeping into the river at Norman Wells and flowing north 120 miles to Fort Good Hope."

Although there is no immediate threat to the fish in the Fort Good Hope area, "if the situation stays the way it is fishing will suffer badly next year," he said.

THE WEATHER

The storm which reached the north coast of B.C. Thursday gave nearly an inch of rain to Prince Rupert and exposed areas reported winds of 30 miles per hour. Snow from the system spread inland overnight reaching the Prince George area around midnight. However, the cloud has been very slow to spread down the coast and skies remained sunny in most of southern B.C. today.

Temperatures remained in he mid-thirties overnight in north coastal areas under cloudy skies. Clear and calm conditions in the south resulted in lows around 30 degrees on the south coast and in the 20s in the interior. Today's highs will again climb to near 50 in the southern B.C. but increased cloud will keep temperatures generally a little lower Saturday.

Moister air is expected throughout B.C. Saturday and some shower activity is likely in most areas.

Westons

Net income was $15.64 million or $1.35 a share in 1970 compared with $15.48 million or $1.33 a share in 1969.

Revenue totaled more than $1 billion in 1970 and $936.37 million the previous year. Sales accounted for $997.38 million of revenue last year and $931.85 million of the 1969 earnings.

Income from operations during 1970 was $14.39 million or $1.23 a share compared with $15.4 million ($1.33). Net income included an $808,000 gain from investments against an investment loss of $869,000 the year before.

Total Petroleum

Total Petroleum (North America) Ltd. reports net income for the year ended Dec. 31 of $1.8 million or 15 cents share compared with $2.4 million (28 cents) for 1969.

The company was created last year by the merger of French Petroleum Co. of Canada Ltd., and Leonard Refineries, Inc.

The decrease resulted from gasoline price wars, and "restrictive crude oil inport quotas, both Canadian and offshore and increased crude oil and operating costs," Total said.

Net sales dropped to $71.3 million in 1970 from $71.5 million the previous year.

Seagrams

Distillers Corporation-Seagrams Ltd. reports net income for the six months ended Jan. 31 of $29.27 million (U.S.) or $1.67 a share compared with income of $27.6 million or $1.58 a share a year ago.

Sales for the period reached a record $805.95 million compared with $772 million in the period ended Jan. 31, 1970.

CZ

A preliminary forecast for 53 per cent decline in net earnings last year was confirmed by Crown Zellerbach Canada Ltd., which reports income of $6.5 million vs. $13.78 million in 1969.

Weak markets for construction products and the freed Canadian dollar were responsible for the decline, which saw a drop in sales from $205 million to $192.97 million, off 6 per cent.

Income taxes were little more than half the amount in 1969, while the company added to its properties by $16 million, compared with $11.8 million the previous year.

Tax Tips

Tax Tips, a daily feature in the Times, is prepared by the Victoria District Office, National Revenue, Taxation. For additional information on preparation of your income tax return, write to the Victoria office of National Revenue, Taxation.

Q. What may I claim on my income tax form as wages to my children for work on the farm?

A. Basically, you may claim an amount that was paid to your child if the child performed work which would have otheerwise required the employment of hired help. Also, the amount paid must be in line with what would have been paid to a stranger, and the work done must be related to farm income.

Q. If I claim the children as exemptions on my tax return, can my wife claim the medical expenses paid on their behalf, on her return?

A. Ordinarily, the answer is no. However, where the bills for the child's medical expenses were received prior to 1970, there are some circumstances when it would be possible to do this. Your District Taxation office would be glad to give you further information.

Q. Since filing my income tax return I have been transferred to another province. I am expecting a refund. What do I do about notifying the Income Tax Department about my change of address? Do I write to the Taxation Data Centre or do I write to my District Taxation Office?

A. You should write to your new District Taxation Office and give them your full name, new address and any other identification, such as your account number and social insurance number and your previous address.

Q. I am now over 70 years of age and have been paying into the Canada Pension Plan and therefore I should be able to draw money from the Pension Plan. Am I allowed to claim my pension even though I am self-employed?

A. Yes, you are now entitled to draw money from the Canada Pension Plan. The fact that you are self-employed and have other income does not affect your eligibility to claim your Canada Pension. In order to make your claim you should get in touch with your nearest Canada Pension Plan office of the Department of National Health and Welfare.

'I Will Not Opt Out' on Zoning Says Cowichan Region Director

By DONNA CLEMENTS

COBBLE HILL — The Cobble Hill director of the Cowichan Valley Regional District has refused to vote against three proposed land-use bylaws.

George Braithwaite told a ratepayers' meeting Thursday: "I will not opt out. I am going along with the idea to keep the area rural."

'SHALL THING'

In reply to many requests, board chairman Bruce Devitt said areas in the district never had an opportunity to opt out of the concept and still do not have the choice.

"We were told it will happen by the department of municipal affairs," he said. "Now we have been told that the regional district is responsible for planning. It is not a 'may' thing. It is a 'shall' thing."

Devitt said the three bylaws are the first steps toward planning. He said the Cobble Hill, Cowichan Station-Glenora-Sahtlam, and Cowichan Bay areas were chosen as a pilot study.

"We knew everyone was really going to be concerned about it," he said.

"But this thing is inevitable because the department of municipal affairs is going to enforce it. We have tried to keep the bylaws very simple. We are not going to move in a big hurry."

Devitt urged the ratepayers to help the directors change the proposed bylaws to suit the areas needs before the provincial government enforces them.

The zoning hearing was the second of a series of three to enable residents to ask questions and to air their views.

The first hearing was Wednesday evening for Cowichan Station-Glenora-Sahtlam residents and the last will be at 7:30 tonight at Bench Elementary for Cowichan Bay.

INFORMAL MEETINGS

Devitt said the board is going to go ahead and vote on the zoning bylaw but will delay the building and subdivision bylaws until they are able to hold several informal meetings where residents can either come and discuss the bylaws or bring their complaints in writing.

"Let's take the present bylaws and amend them as you want them," Devitt said. "We are asking you what you want."

One ratepayer pointed out that if the bylaws are delayed too long there will be time for people to exploit what the bylaws are trying to protect.

"If the people protest enough and delay the bylaw some people will be able to sell, make a bloody killing and get out," he said.

Consulting planner John Northey of Vancouver noted that in the past when similar bylaws had been announced for the Gulf Islands over 2,000 lots were created by the delay.

Crisis Centre Studied

DUNCAN — The family counselling service in Duncan may set up a crisis centre or a psychological hot line.

Members of the Duncan branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association were told at their recent annual meeting the centre would provide people in distress with someone to reach quickly to talk about their problems.

Advisory board member Joan Robinson explained that similar facilities are already provided in Vancouver, Penticton, Port Alberni and Nanaimo. She said the response to these crisis centres has shown "the definite need many people have, to reach out when they are in distress."

Members of the meeting encouraged the family counselling service to continue to gather information on the establishment of the centre regarding costs, and training techniques for volunteers.

The new executive is: president, Bob Moss; first vice-president, Dr. Alan Robinsoff; second vice-president, Peter Yelland; secretary, Noreen Bruce, and treasurer, Mrs. A. Williams.

Forestry Research Started

A new forest genetics research plantation and arboretum has been established near Cowichan Station, five miles south of Duncan, by the Canadian Forestry Service.

Primary use of the site recently acquired from the provincial government will be the growing and testing of seedlings and rooted cuttings as part of the CFS's western hemlock tree improvement program.

Second only in commercial importance to the Douglas fir, little is known of the Western hemlock's genetics. The new research will be aimed at solving present growing problems.

The planted stock will be studied for volume growth and form and will serve for controlled pollination studies in the future.

Insect and disease-resistant strains of Douglas fir and spruce will also be planted.

A total of 2,000 rooted cuttings will be planted this month, as well as 12,000 two-year-old hemlock seedlings.

DEATH DATE AMENDED

Stewart Trial Ready for Jury

NANAIMO (CP) — The non-capital murder trial of Dr. Glen Stewart, 43, is expected to go to the jury today, its seventh day of proceedings.

Stewart is charged with killing Gordon Adrian Kralt, 23, caretaker at the Ross Bible Camp at Pachena Bay, near Bamfield, last Oct. 31.

The original indictment alleged the slaying occurred on or about Oct. 31, but the Crown later amended the charge to state the death did occur Oct. 31.

Robert Schofield, a lawyer from Port Alberni, testified in British Columbia Supreme Court Thursday that he saw Stewart between 10 a.m. and 11 a.m. Oct. 30 and did not notice any marks on the doctor's face.

BANDAGED FINGER

Maria Trigiani, a Crown witness, testified earlier that Stewart had a purple eye and bandaged finger when she saw him in Victoria on the night of the 31st. Two other witnesses also said the doctor had a black eye and hand scratches.

Both the defence and the Crown were expected to give summations to the jury this morning with Mr. Justice Alan Macfarlane likely to charge the jury in the afternoon.

Sixty-six exhibits were introduced at the trial and testimony was heard from 42 Crown witnesses and two defence witnesses.

Building Owner Guilty of Arson

PORT ALBERNI — Joseph Kobescak was convicted Thursday of setting fire to an apartment building he had insured for $71,000.

He was remanded to April 2 for sentence.

Truck Crashes Into Living Room

NANAIMO (CP) — A stolen light truck crashed through an outside wall and the living room wall before coming to a halt early Thursday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Ball, 650 Brechin Rd.

Police said the truck had been chased at speeds up to 70 m.p.h. and went out of control. It soared 47 feet through the air, bounced off a log, smashed through a chain-link fence, took to the air again for 50 feet and hit the Ball residence.

Damage was estimated at $10,000.

The only injury was a two-stitch cut to the driver.

Later Thursday, a 16-year-old runaway from the nearby Brannan Lake School for Boys was remanded to Tuesday without plea on charges of car theft and criminal negligence.

An Announcement

On Saturday (Bonus Day) Miss Frith Fabrics and The Treasure Chest will be offering fabulous bargains. After Saturday, the tag ends from each will be available in our "No Name" store. At least for the present it will have "no name" but we'll have a contest to name it very soon! However, we are making the mezzanine of 1623 Douglas available to various deserving agencies in Victoria to display their crafts and sell them. The agencies are, Arbutus Craft, Begbie Guest Home, Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded and the Canadian Mental Health Association. We hope you will pay them a visit.

In the meantime we are proceeding with our plans to set up a special store for Junior stylings with fashions that will appeal especially to the younger set in high school, university and the young business girl. We'll be open Monday. Watch for our "name" contest won't you?

Hunt's On For 1878 Cannon

Treasure hunters hope to unearth an old cannon dating back to the Russian war scare of 1878 during a hunt of the B.C.'s legislative buildings Saturday morning.

Decades-old rumors of old guns buried behind the old Menzies Street drill hall, now the motor vehicles branch, were revived recently when a metal detector indicated a mass of metal where the guns are supposedly hidden.

J. R. Rippengale, superintendent of Fort Rodd Hill, says recovery of such equipment for display purposes at the old fort would be "a fabulous start for centennial year."

He adds: "The only way to find out what is down there is to open the ground and have a look.

"From the description given me by the late Don McDowell, a grand old gentleman, we could find a 64-pounder of the kind mounted at Finlayson Point, Victoria Point and Brothers Island at the time of the Russian war scare of 1878."

A backhoe and other equipment will be used for Saturday's dig which has been approved by the public works department.

John Howard Chairman Named

Gamaleil Milner was elected chairman recently of the Victoria area council of the John Howard Society of Vancouver Island. He is superintendent of William Head open prison.

Vice-chairmen are Mrs. K. Greenwood and H. B. Dick and treasurer is P. Chesshire. Immediate past chairman is M. P. Paine.

Our new Corolla.
Luxurious accommodation for four.
Separate entrances.

We finally did it. We made a 4 door Corolla. We did it for people who might prefer not to fight their way around the front seat. And especially for people with children.

Besides the 4 doors you get a 102 hp engine, over 30 miles per gallon, power-assisted front disc brakes and a 4-speed synchromesh transmission. (The automatic is optional).

Inside the doors you get fully reclining bucket seats, carpeting, tinted glass, an electric rear window defroster and plenty of quiet (providing you aren't one of the people with children).

But the most beautiful door is the one with the sticker in the window. Because on that sticker, following a long list of standard equipment, is one of the most beautiful things about a Toyota—the price. Corollas start at under $2,000. The 4-Door is $2,250* but it's a luxury car. With luxurious accommodation for four. Separate entrances.

TOYOTA

More Boats to Carry Self-Inflating Liferafts

The size of commercial fishing boats required to carry self-inflating liferafts aboard is being lowered through amendments now being written into the Canada Shipping Act.

The act now calls for all commercial vessels of 15 gross tons to have such a liferaft.

One of the three steamship inspectors employed by the federal department of transport in Victoria said today that the tonnage requirement will be reduced to nine.

"It's one of the amendments that are in the fire now."

Had the amendment been in effect Saturday two lives might have been saved when the 42-foot troller Janola of Walter Wick capsized off Beechey Head.

She is 11 tons, three tons under the present requirement.

Wicks, his wife, Marjorie, and their friends, Mr. and Mrs. John Parris were in the water more than an hour before they were rescued by Percy Brown of the Beechey Bay Marina. Parris and Mrs. Wicks died of drowning.

Had the boat had a regulation life raft, with its protective cover, the ending might have been less tragic.

Even larger fish boats required to carry the raft have been known to bend the rules by borrowing one simply to pass the inspection required by the act every four years.

The extent to which this is practised cannot be pinned down but indications are that the numbers are high.

The steamship inspector was unable to give exact numbers of fish boats in the area required to carry such rafts — there are too many of them.

Yet, a spokesman for Jeune Bros., who are commissioned to check out the rafts each year, estimates that of the 200 that are examined "about 25 or 30" are from commercial fish boats.

He explains the 200 figure includes rafts carried aboard Island Tug and Barge's vessels, department of transport vessels, and boats from Vancouver and other parts of Vancouver Island.

Each raft must be examined yearly and certified as being completely operative.

"If the raft has gone past its examination due date it's not allowed to go out of port."

He agreed it's quite possible that many boat owners borrow rafts at inspection time.

"They're allowed to do so. As long as they have a good raft aboard when they're inspected, who cares?"

WAY CLEAR FOR EXPO IN SPOKANE IN '74

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — Legislative action was completed Thursday in the House of Representatives on three bills authorizing state participation in a six-mouth world's fair in Spokane in 1974.

One bill creates a 15-member commission to be appointed by the governor, legislative leaders and local authorities to stage the fair, to be known as Expo 74.

Don't Overdo Jobless Fight, Says Rasminsky

OTTAWA (CP). — Louis Rasminsky, governor of the Bank of Canada, warned Thursday against the danger of overdoing the fight against unemployment and setting off another burst of price inflation.

A margin of unemployment needs to be maintained, he said.

"Some risks of a resumption of price inflation are being run, and it will be necessary for economic policy to continue to be vigilant," he said in his annual report to the government.

Rasminsky warned that government spending and borrowing should be cautious, and carefully kept in step with the control of credit exercised by the Bank of Canada.

He said there was a sharp increase in government spending and borrowing last year and concluded that expansion of the public debt was not inappropriate then.

INFLATION THREATENS

But when the rate of economic growth is gathering momentum, and demand pressures threaten to bring on inflation, it was important that the government be ready to rein in its borrowing and spending.

Rasminsky said excessive pay increases continue to threaten price stability. But outright government pay and price controls would cause serious problems.

He praised the efforts of the federal prices and incomes commission in its efforts to win widespread support for voluntary pay and price restraint.

But Rasminsky's assessment of how the economy should be managed — with a margin of unemployment — differed in emphasis from that of the Economic Council of Canada.

The council urged in a report last fall that the government should make economic growth its main aim, "to begin to reduce the significant human and economic costs of high unemployment."

Rasminsky, by contrast, suggested it would be dangerous if not impossible to maintain growth at full potential.

TWO EXTREMES

Unemployment could be avoided by policies that encourage or tolerate continuous inflation. Inflation could be avoided by holding business activity down but paying in high unemployment.

In the absence of any other proven techniques of economic management in a capitalist economy, the government and the central bank must aim at a line in between the extremes, aiming at durable growth and employment while maintaining price stability.

BILL WALKER

Sports fans who abhor the physical and personal violence often associated with the games people play are about to get their wish. There will be an event here next week at which it is said that there will be no undisciplined fighting ... no reruns ... and where players will demonstrate how to take a knock without shouting or complaining unnecessarily about it.

Impossible? Not likely.

For this is English rugby, often described as one of the last few remaining bastions of amateur sport and, in point, a game in which the kids are taught to accept a decision without pampering.

The formal designation of the event is Victoria's first-ever schoolboy rugby international, Japanese-Canadian style.

And if there appeared to be an inference that this was to be a context in which the game was the thing, not the personal inhibitions of the players, it was intended. National League hockey, for the nonce, had been relegated into complete disrespect.

Former Scottish international Dave Mackenzie was enjoying himself immensely. He was on familiar ground. Having played in Japan as a member of an all-Canadian team, and also officiated there, he was understandably impressed with the foothold the game had taken, and the popularity it enjoyed.

"In the era of enlightenment," he intoned to a press-radio group this week.

He need have gone no further. He had made his point. It was that if the enduring curiosity of the Japanese suggested they would settle for nothing less than the best when it came to selecting a sport, they got it when they picked on rugby.

"It is the nationao game in over 150 high schools," he explained.

"There is good rugby played in that part of the world," he added. "They really work at it, and play the game with great enthusiasm."

Then he assessed the visitors, as to ability, and dedication. "This will be a well-disciplined side. It will be a strong team, and the best possible."

In yet another judgment of the tourists, he suggested that this was a national club in the strictest sense of the term as it is understood in Japan.

"And in Japan, the country comes first.'

The message was crystal clear. The city juniors should not be taking their task lightly. In that regard, Mackenzie, happily, appeared unworried.

"You know, there is some beautiful rugby being played here," he asserted. "The players have been well coached, and will give a good account of themselves."

Of the contrasting styles, he explained that the Japanese prefer to keep the ball in play, "just love the scrums," and will probably attempt to force many here.

There was a twinkle in his eyes as he recalled one incident as a case in point, and in which he unwittingly was the central figure.

"I was officiating in a game in Japan," he said, "when suddenly I found myself caught up in one of the team movements. There was nothing I could do about it, and before long I was deposited on the heap."

He also had a message for Don Burgess who will referee the game here. For this was another phase of the Japanese approach which still intrigues him. Mainly perhaps, because it turned out to be a compliment although he understood not a word of it at the time.

"It was after a game I had refereed," he laughed, "and suddenly I was being descended upon, and engulfed by the players. Then they tossed me in the air.

"I was a bit worried, until I found out later that this was only a part of the game. It was a mark of appreciation for the referee."

But if the Japanese schoolboys are their country's pride and joy (they are), don't have any bad rugby habits (Victoria, either), and love their officials (that'll be a welcome change), what about the strategy the local team must employ to overcome the visitors?

Because they are bigger. The city forwards average 5'11" in height and 179 pounds in weight as compared to the Japanese average of 5'8½" and 166 pounds. There also is a disparity in the backs, for the city 5'7½" and 160 pounds, and for the visitors, 5'7" and 145 pounds.

Which is reason enough that the Japanese prefer scrums, as their size is definitely against any advantage being obtained in a lineout. And if they prefer to keep the ball in play by rarely kicking to touch, it is because of the same thing.

But they do have other qualifications of a superior nature. They are extremely quick off the mark, the scouting report says. Besides, they are very fast, run well, but often to the inside, not daylight.

Thus it would appear that first they must be caught, and a cardinal rule the city juniors must adopt if they wish to be clued in quickly on how best to stop the visitors is this.

"Tackling is vital," as the book says. But remember: The smaller the man, the lower the tackle.

And no whimpering when you miss, either.

Undefeated Four Squads to Watch

Claremont, Bays Moving to Final

Two Victoria-area challengers, the perennial threats from Salmon Arm and a well-balanced New Westminster squad jointly stepped forward as the teams to watch in the final scramble for the B.C. senior high school girls' basketball championship.

The four, including Oak Bay and defending champion Claremont, completed preliminary action Friday with perfect 3-0, won-lost records.

Joining them in the championship bracket of the four-day tournament at Victoria High were Vancouver's Prince of Wales, Abbotsford, Kelowna and Penticton — the runnersup in four sections.

Eight other squads were relegated to consolation bracket.

ATKINSON SHINES

Play resumed this morning with Prince of Wales facing New Westminster, Penticton playing Oak Bay, Abbotsford going against Claremont and Salmon Arm meeting Kelowna.

Sparked by Laurie Atkinson's 17-point spree, Claremont wrapped up section honors Friday by defeating Penticton 29-22.

Oak Bay won its third straight by shading Prince George 20-17 as starry Joanne Van Schaik contributed 10 points to run her three-game total to 41.

SOLID DEPTH

New Westminster, showing excellent depth, emerged as the highest-scoring team in the preliminary three games. The Royal City team scored 113 points while limiting rivals to 53.

Claremont came up with a 99-63 points for-against record, Salmon Arm was 94-60 while Oak Bay, showing off the strongest defence, had a 72-43 mark.

Perreault Establishes Rookie Scoring Record

By The Canadian Press

Gil Perreault, the Buffalo Sabres centre favored to win the National Hockey League's Rookie-of-the-Year award, improved his chances Thursday night by scoring the 25th goal of his first season in the league.

The 20-year-old sensation set an NHL record for goals by a rookie by counting No. 35 as the Sabres defeated St. Louis Blues 5-3.

Perreault, who received a standing ovation from Buffalo fans after he scored at 15:43 of the second period, broke the record of 34 goals shared by Nels Stewart of the old Montreal Maroons, Danny Grant of Minnesota North Stars and Norm Ferguson of Oakland Seals, now California Golden Seals.

Stewart set the original mark in the 1925-26 season in a 36-game schedule and Grant and Ferguson both tied it in the 76-game 1968-69 season.

In other games Thursday night, Philadelphia Flyers edged New York Rangers 2-1, Boston Bruins downed Detroit Red Wings 7-3, Montreal Canadiens beat Toronto Maple Leafs 4-1 and Los Angeles Kings beat Chicago Black Hawks 3-2.

Perreault, one of the main reasons the Sabres are in fifth place in the strong East Division, ahead of Detroit and Vancouver Canucks, had scored only 17 goals and 16 assists in 43 games up to the all-star game Jan. 19. But since then he has scored 18 more goals in 27 games and picked up 12 assists.

The Flyers, battling with Pittsburgh Penguins for the fourth playoff spot in the West Division, increased their lead over the fifth-place Penguins to seven points with their win over the Rangers. The Penguins have eight games left in the schedule and the Flyers nine.

CHECKING GOOD

The Flyers, displaying strong checking, got goals from Chris Schmautz and Bobby Clarke, gaining a measure of revenge on the Rangers, who whipped them 7-2 Friday. Walt Tkaczuk scored New York's goal. Bruce Gamble was in goal for the Flyers, filling in for the injured Doug Favell who suffered a concussion Wednesday when he fell during a practice session.

The Red Wings, who have had 18 goals scored against them in their last two games, both against Boston, got goals from Alex Delvecchio, Mike Robitaille and Guy Charron.

Left winger Frank Mahovlich, a former Leaf, and his brother Peter sparked the Canadiens. Frank scored two goals and his brother assisted on two others. Phil Roberto and defenceman Guy Lapointe also scored for the Canadiens while Dave Keon scored for the Leafs.

Toronto played without forwards Paul Henderson, Norm Ullman and Brian Spencer. Spencer, the latest among the Leafs on the injury list, twisted his knee in practice in Toronto Wednesday.

LARGE ENTRY IN SWIM MEET

Approximately 550 swimmers will be competing in the third annual Victoria Olympian Centennial invitational swimming meet Saturday and Sunday at the Crystal Garden pool.

Burnaby Tyees, who won the team crown last year, are not among the 14 clubs entered from the lower mainland, Vancouver Island and Washington.

Events begin at 10 a.m. each day among simmers from Canadian Dolphin Swim Club, Cascade Swim Club, Hollyburn Country Club, Juan de Fuca Cohoes, Killarney Swim Club, New Westminster 'Y' Kings, North Vancouver Swim Club, Port Alberni Aquatic Club, Port Angeles Swim Club, Port Townsend Swim Club, Renfrew Swim Club, Tsawwassen Swimming Academy, Vancouver Amateur Swim Club and host Victoria Olympian Swim Club.

Cordova Bay Wins Playoff

Cordova Bay advanced to the Vancouver Island playoff at Nanaimo by defeating Brentwood Bay 28-22 Thursday to win a two-game series for the Peninsula Basketball League bantam boys' title.

Cordova Bay's juvenile girls' squad, which continued an undefeated season by downing Victoria First United in the Island final, will compete for the provincial crown next weekend at Salmon Arm.

Hometown Boy Jars Golf Pros

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Lee Trevino shot a six-under-par 66 Thursday in the first round of the $125,000 Greater Jacksonville open golf tournament but he had to share first place with the lone amateur in the field, hometown boy Steve Melnyk.

Both burned up the front nine of the 6,943-yard Hidden Hills course in 30 strokes and both eagled the 525-yard fifth hole. But they each settled for par 36 on the tougher back nine.

Trevino and Melnyk led a pair of little-known pros by two strokes heading into today's second round. Vic Loustalot and John Schlee opened with 68s.

Palmer and Wilf Homenuik of Winnipeg also shot 71s.

Among those at 69 were Tony Jacklin of England and Ray Floyd, both former winners of the Greater Jacksonville Open.

Oak Bay Rescued By Closing Surge

NORTH VANCOUVER — Oak Bay, runner-up in the Vancouver Island tournament, rallied in the second half Thursday to survive the opening round in the second annual B.C. junior high school boys' basketball championship tournament.

Bays downed Windsor of North Vancouver, 38-35.

Baays were behind 11-2 after the first quarter and still trailed 18-13 at the intermission. Grant Boland, who scored 15 points overall, sparked the ecnd-half surge that produced the victory.

Ross Ward scored 10 points to pace Windsor.

PLAY KELOWNA TEAM

Bays now advance to the quarter-finals and face Dr. Knox of Kelowna at 4 today.

Brian Noga of Burnaby's Alpha set a scoring record of 42 points in another game, but in vain. Alpha was nipped 60-59 by Lakewood of Prince George.

In other Thursday encounters, Lord Byng of Vancouver bounced Rossland 49-24 and North Delta defeated McNicoll Park of Penticton, 50-34.

Windsor (35) — Nick Bergh 6, Norm Binton 1, Mike Gauld 6, Neil Skippon 8, Dave Gummer 4, Ross Ward 10.

Aussie Cracks Course Record

NEW DELHI (AP) — Graham Marsh, 27, of Australia fired a seven-under-par 66 Thursday to break the course record at the Delhi Golf Club and take the first-round lead in the 72-hole Indian open golf championship.

Marsh was one stroke ahead of David Graham, also of Australia, and Tomo Ishii of Japan.

Stan Homenuik of Winnipeg had a first-round 71 over the 6,951-yard course, shooting 37 on the front nine, and 34 coming home.

REST BROUGHT CHANGE . . . . . . CENTS HERE SATURDAY

Cougars' Cowick Clipping Along

By ERNIE FEDORUK

But for Bruce Cowick, a rest brought on a change.

Considering the fact that this is his third term with Victoria Cougars, Cowick had been experiencing only a mediocre season in the British Columbia Junior Hockey League.

Then the six-foot, 190-pound winger was tagged with a two-game suspension in mid-February by league president Dr. Arnold Lowden.

That rest brought on a change.

Cowick has scored eight goals and 12 assists in the 10 games since serving his suspension. The recent spree boosted his individual totals to 31 goals, 44 assists and 74 points, marking him as the team's No. 3 scorer.

Cowick is one of four forwards bringing enlightment to the face of coach Mike Shabaga. The others are Scott Munro, Greg Robinson and rookie Mark Thomas.

The playoffs get under way at Memorial Arena next Wednesday with Cougars meeting Chilliwack Bruins to open a best-of-seven Coastal Division semi-final series.

There is one business matter to be settled before then. That comes up Saturday night, also at the Arena, when Vancouver Centennials move in to help Cougars drop the curtain on the 1970-71 campaign.

It will be "Fan Appreciation Night," starting at 8:30 p.m. As well, four individual awards will be bestowed on Victoria players.

Blacker the Fish — Better the Day for Fishing

STEWART LANG

Reports on The Outdoors

Some Rambling Notes Along the Trail:

Sunny weather during the past week has prompted a quick assessment of our camping gear and needs for the coming season . . . One fact emerged — our old and heavy sleeping bags would have to go . . . They served their purpose well in a camper but as far as backpacking goes, they left a lot to be desired, especially since pounds seem to multiply when carried on your back for any distance . . . Through careful browsing, we've found some down bags that cost approximately $40 each and are comfortable down to 10 degrees . . . which should be sufficient . . . But while thoughts of camping days are in our heads, the snowshoes and skis stay on top of our pile of gear—just in case.

Speaking about snowshoes reminds us of a pleasant lack of activity now detected in the winter woods . . . Deep snow on many of the back roads has eliminated a lot of people and opened the way for a whole new experience . . . Like the taste of a juicy steak broiled over alder coals in a foot and a half of snow . . . The complete, muffled silence found only in snow-bound woods . . . And attempts to decipher the snow-etched paths and experiences of various species of wildlife.

Trout anglers could do worse than spend the next few weeks checking tackle in preparation for spring . . . There's all those matted flies to refurbish, and new ones to tie . . . Hooks need to be honed until "tacky" to touch with a fingernail . . . Lines should be checked for strength-sapping knots or kinks and leaders replaced . . . Reels should be "torn down," cleaned and lubricated . . . rods should be checked for loose guides that might require rewinding while ferrules should be secured and lubricated . . . In addition, there might be spoons to polish, nets to mend and waders to patch or resole.

Changing the scene a little, we find an interesting fact that must be taken into account by those who advocate an Arctic oil pipeline . . . Streams in the area would be the only source of gravel for any construction activities . . . And many species of Arctic fish spawn only once every three years.

Victoria Four-Wheel Drive Club added Mrs. A. Knight to the executive list as secretary at a Friday meeting . . . approximately 30 members and 10 vehicles took part in a jaunt through the Sooke hills on Sunday . . . The club is now affiliated with the Civil Defence organization and might be expected to take part in some search and rescue missions.

Outdoor Club of Victoria will hold a hike from the southerly Shawnigan Lake road to Niagara Canyon via a system of old logging roads . . . Distance is approximately nine miles but all downhill . . . Further information is available from leader Herb Warren at 383-5163.

Chinook Club members of the Victoria-Saanich Inlet Anglers' Association are reminded of the Frostbite Derby on Sunday . . . hours are from dawn until noon . . . Best spots around Vancouver Island for catching spring salmon are Trial Island, Esquimalt Harbor, Sansum Narrows, Crofton, Quathiaski Cove and Duncan Bay . . . Best catches of large grilse have been in Saanich Inlet, Northwest Bay and Kelsey Bay.

Stan Williams reports that chunky bluebacks, which were believed farther south in Saanich Inlet, have been caught right in mid-channel off Pat Bay . . . These fish are now averaging around 2½ pounds . . . Steelhead returns have been reported fair to hot in the following Island rivers: Cowichan, Koksilah, Nanaimo (Bore Hole), Somass, Stamp, Oyster and Salmon.

Fred Usher to Guide Team at World Meet

Fred Usher of Victoria has been appointed manager of the Canadian team scheduled to compete in the world archery championships in July at York, England, as part of that city's 1,900th anniversary celebrations.

Usher was selected to head the team by the Federation of Canadian Archers.

In his third term as president of the Victoria Bowmen, Usher is also president of the Vancouver Island Archery Association, vice-president of the Pacific Northwest Archery Association and a director of the B.C. Archery Association.

EIGHT-MEMBER TEAM

Four men and four women will make up the Canadian squad, which will be selected following the national championships, July 4-8 at Richmond's Minoru Park.

Several other major events will be held in Victoria as part of a big archery year for B.C.

Victoria will host the PNAA championships, July 17-18; the FITA (Federation Internationale de Tir a L'Arc), June 5 and 6; Queen Victoria Open shoot on May 30, and a dual tournament to finish the BCAA and VIAA indoor seasons at Work Point barracks gymnasium on March 28.

Softball Meeting

All young men aged 21 or under wishing to play for a new junior softball team in the Victoria League are asked to attend a meeting at 1:30 p.m. Sunday in the Brentwood Community Hall. Further information is available by telephoning organizer Ron Drayton at 652-3352.

Duguid Rink's Record Pleases All But Skip

MEGEVE, France (CP) — Everybody appeared enthralled with the 6-0 record Canada carried into today's final round of regulation play in the world curling championship. Everyone but the man most concerned, skip Don Duguid of Winnipeg.

Despite an easy 8-4 win against Germany's Manfred Raederer in Thursday night's sixth round, Duguid refused to concede that his second-consecutive world title was in the bag.

"It's not over yet," Duguid said. "Anyone can win in this setup." The Winnipeg skip was referring to the playoff system in use here, whereby the first four finishers in regulation play move into the playoffs tonight.

Under the system, the first team meets the fourth, and the second-place finisher plays the third. The two winners meet in the final round Saturday night.

Duguid could repeat his 7-0 record of last year, but lose the title by dropping his semi-final or final round to an opponent that had a less-impressive record in the regular seven rounds.

PICKED TO REPEAT

But no one here is betting this will happen. Most figure Duguid will repeat last year's performance, when he drew a bye in the semi-final, when only three teams were eligible for the playoffs, and bombed Scotland 11-4 for the title.

"But one bad game and you're out," was Duguid's reply to well-wishers following Thursday night's win.

As a result of sixth-round matches, Scotland had a 5-1 record, while the U.S., skipped by Dale Dalziel, and Sweden's Bjell Grengmark had three wins and three losses.

With 2-4 marks were Switzerland's Cesare Canepa, France's Pierre Boan and Norway's Knut Bjaanas. Germany's Raederer had one win in six starts.

While Duguid was breezing along to his easy victory against Germany Thursday night, Sanderson had his hands full with the Swiss.

The Scotsman had to steal the final three ends to come up with his 7-6 victory. Canepa, with the score tied 6-6 in the 12th, missed a takeout to allow the Edinburgh rink its victory.

Other night games saw the U.S. dump France 12-4, and Sweden outlast Norway 9-6.

Fifth Round

Canada 10, Sweden 6.
Norway 4, France 3.

Saints Boost Win Streak

First United Saints maintained their unbeaten record this season by downing Yarrows 47-29 to capture the Victoria and District Amateur Basketball Association bantam girls' playoff title Thursday at Mount View High School.

It was the second straight season that coach Moe Turner's charges have gone through regular-season as well as playoff games in undefeated fashion.

In earlier battles of the double-loss elimination playoffs, Saints defeated Esquimalt and sent Yarrows into the losers' bracket.

Marie-Anne Longmore topped Saints with 12 points while Shirley Marshall added 11. Janice Turner led Yarrows with 12 points.

Duncan Quartet Legion's Leaders

The Stewart foursome picked up a pair of wins Thursday, defeating Earl Jesse of Ontario 8-6 in seventh-round play, and crushing Frank Hoar of Truro, N.S., 11-7 in an eighth-round game.

The B.C. record stands at seven wins and one loss going into today's final scheduled round of play.

Stewart said his rink had been curling "very well" since a first-round 16-6 defeat at the hands of the New Brunswick foursome skipped by Louis Dugre of Chatham.

A B.C. win today over Manitoba, led by Mac Scales of Winnipeg, would give the West Coast rink the title. New Brunswick is 6-2 and must win along with a B.C. defeat to force a playoff.

Thursday's results:

SEVENTH ROUND—B.C. 8, Ontario 6. Newfoundland 12, Quebec 11; Alberta 8, New Brunswick 5; Nova Scotia 8, Saskatchewan 2; Manitoba 13, P.E.I. 8.

EIGHTH ROUND — B.C. 11, Nova Scotia 7; Manitoba 13, Saskatchewan 12; P.E.I. 10, Quebec 9; Alberta 11, Newfoundland 5; New Brunswick 8, Ontario 6.

Weekend Ski Report

Forbidden Plateau reports a base of 93 inches at the bottom of the T-Bar and a 165-inch base at the top.

Green Mountain is still in the process of digging out after an excess of snow forced a closure last weekend but is expected to operate Saturday and Sunday.

Other Pacific Northwest areas:

MT. PILCHUK: clear, 20 degrees, no new snow, 155-inch total.

TV Return For Boxing

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Boxing fans who shelled out $20 or more to watch the Ali-Frazier fight on theatre television may soon have the sport back in their living rooms on a regular basis.

"With the shot in the arm that the Ali-Frazier fight gave boxing, I think it will go over," says Gil Clancy, who is working on a Fight of the Month television series that will start in April.

He's working to set up bouts to follow the first show, the light heavyweight title fight April 24 between Bob Foster and challenger Ray Anderson.

BOWLER OF WEEK

Back on list of winners in Times Bowler-of-the-Week contest for sixth consecutive season is Helen Young, who captured women's tenpin laurels in 21st week of eighth annual competition. Helen tumbled pins for 182-202-213—597 series in Ladies' Classic League at Mayfair Lanes to collect weekly honors and berth in Bowler-of-the-Year rolloffs on May 2.

Junior XV Picked To Play Japanese

Castaways will be represented by nine players on the Victoria Rugby Union's junior (under-19) side that will play the touring all-Japan high school team Monday at 8 p.m. in Royal Athletic Park.

Selections for the international exhibition were announced Thursday by the VRU.

Picked from Castaways were wingers Charlie Fuqua and John Boldach, centre Craig Dyk, standoff-half Mel Reeves (captain), scrum-half Mike Briggs, hooker Dan Davis and other forwards Andy Hilliard (vice-captain), Rick Dade and Dan McCarten.

University of Victoria will be represented by centre Peter Reinholdt and forwards Mark Fellner, Ian McLean, Steve Thompson and Doug Manning.

GRAHAM AT FULLBACK

Fullback John Graham of Oak Bay Wanderers completes the starting lineup. Selected as reserves are the Uvic duo of Russell Mark and Mike Bull and Oak Bay's Mike Waburski.

Eight members of the representative side — Graham, Fuqua, Dyk, Reeves, Briggs, Fellner, Dade and McCarten — have received rugby training at University School. Other schools for which players have competed are Mount View (Boldach and Davis), Shawnigan Lake (Reinholdt) and Claremont (McLean).

Monday's match, first in a five-game tour of B.C. by the Japanese schoolboys, is scheduled to start at 8 p.m.

Anti-Soviet Exhibitions Hockey Threat

BERN, Switzerland (AP) — The Soviet Union is favored to retain its world ice hockey championship sarting Today — one that officials fear may be marred by demonstrations against the Soviets.

The six teams shooting for the crown play one set of games in Bern today through March 26 with the return games scheduled for Geneva March 27-April 3.

Precautions have been taken to check anti-Soviet demonstrations by Czech exiles, particularly in Bern. Prague officials advised the Swiss to avoid selling block ticket bookings to Czechs living abroad. Sporting events between the Czechs and Soviets have been marred several times by demonstrations ever since the 1968 invasion of Czechoslovakia.

"The Czechs, Soviets, Swedes, Germans and Finns had better forget any ideas that we are going to be powder puff opponents like we were two years ago," says United States coach Murray Williamson. The Americans open against the Czechs Friday while the Soviet Union meets West Germany.

Irate Bookie Refunds Bets

LONDON (AP) — This land of the often strange, unusual and offbeat, came up Thursday with a soft-hearted bookie.

Philip Laister, manager of a big betting shop near Birmingham, England's second largest city, said he thought his customers got gypped over a prize fight decision and so he is giving the losers their money back.

Soft-hearted Phil was burned up by the verdict which dethroned heavyweight Henry Cooper and gave his British, European and British Empire boxing titles to 21-year-old Joe Bugner in London Tuesday night.

The controversial verdict was by only one-quarter of a point and many ringside observers were aghast.

"I get my living out of sport and I felt that this was a slur on boxing," said Laister. "It will cost me a week's pay and perhaps a start in to the second week to refund the money to those who bet on Henry."

How much that is, he wouldn't say.

About that decision, Laister said that boxing fans on the continent would have "gone berserk."

FANS AROUSED

"I have talked to many people who were disgusted," he added.

"So many people are not in a position to do anything about it. But I felt that I could. So I am paying back the stake money to the people who backed Henry."

Cooper was 2 to 5 favorite to win, Bugner 2 to 1.

"I made them dead level going into the last round and Bugner won that. This is the first time I have been in this sort of rumpus but I shall hold my head high."

ENDS HOLDOUT

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — Outfielder Pete Rose signed his 1971 contract with Cincinnati Reds for an estimated $2,500 cost-of-living raise, ending his 14-day holdout. Rose had asked a $5,000 raise from his $105,000 salary in 1970.

Winnipeg Unveils Plan For Dome on Stadium

WINNIPEG (CP) — Plans for a $7,500,000, 220-foot-high structure to enclose the Winnipeg Stadium were unveiled at a news conference Thursday by Mayor Stephen Juba and Winnipeg Enterprises Corporation, a city-owned body.

The roof would be built of steel and wood, covering playing surfaces used by Winnipeg Blue Bombers of the Western Football Conference and the International Baseball League's Winnipeg Whips.

LENGTH OF FIELD

The peak of the roof would run the length of the football field. A. H. Waisman, an architect, said it would take at least 18 months to build but football and baseball seasons would not be interruped.

Juba said total cost would climb to about $10,000,000 with the installation of artificial turf and addition of 5,000 seats to the stadium's present capacity of about 22,500.

He said the city-owned corporation is prepared to put up one-third of the cost of the structure and the balance would have to be raised by private donations and from Manitoba and federal governments.

He stressed that neither provincial nor federal authorities are committed to the project, but said he is optimistic. The city could guarantee a debenture issue to raise the corporation's contribution.

Corporation representatives conferred with the city finance committee following the news conference and outlined the scheme to aldermen. The committee made no decision at the meeting.

NO REFERENDUM

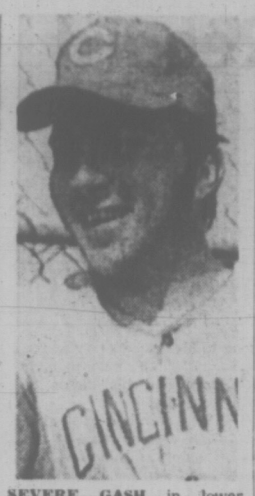
Juba said no referendum would be held on the plan, because the City of Winnipeg will only be asked to guarantee the corporation's debenture issue, not to raise the money itself.

He said the city's role in the venture would have to be approved by the finance committee and the province would have to give the city permission to amend its charter for such a large amount of borrowing.

Saul Cherniak, Manitoba finance minister, who was at the news conference, termed the scheme "a very interesting proposal." The province would have to study costs and likely benefits before making any commitment.

The structure is called Maniplex by its backers and its outer walls would stand 30 feet beyond the sides of the stadium. Completion would be scheduled for 1974, the city's centennial year.

Jack Willis, chairman of the Metro Winnipeg council, told the news conference he felt the plan was a "visionary" one. He agreed with Juba that all levels of government should share responsibility, but declined to comment further.



SEVERE GASH in lower right leg has sidelined Cincinnati catcher Johnny Bench, the National League's most valuable player in 1970. Bench suffered injury sliding into third base in exhibition baseball games against Boston Red Sox in Florida and 10 stitches were required to close cut, which will keep Bench on sidelines for at least one week.

OAKS, FUTURITY . . . . . . SUMMER MEET FEATURES

Stakes Going Up at Sandown

The Vancouver Island Quarter Horse Racing Association, its freshly-signed five-year lease on Sandown Park in hand, is off and running in a bid to establish summer racing.

The Island bodys 12-day meet for thoroughbreds and quarter horses will start July 30 and wind up Aug. 21.

In detailing some of the VIQHRA's plans and progress, general manager Danny Hajnal reported the Sandown lease, from the B.C. Jockey Club, was officially signed Tuesday.

He also announced the appointment of a racing secretary, the addition of two major stakes races, and sundry plans designed "to put Island racing on the map."

Destined to preside as meet secretary will be Arizonan Claude Berry, who handled the post last year when quarter horse racing was introduced at a three-day meet.

Hajnal said the Capital City Oaks, a stakes race for three-year-old fillies, will carry an estimated gross value of $3,000, making it one of the richest thoroughbred races ever run at Sandown. A total of 23 fillies have already been nominated for the Oaks, including Sally O'Salt, winner of the Debutante and and B.C.'s top two-year-old filly last year.

Another race that will appeal greatly to breeders and owners will be a Futurity for two-year-old thoroughbreds. The race is expected to carry a purse of $2,500.

Hajnal also reported: Awards will be introduced for breeders, trainers and jockeys; tote machines (rather than hand-pulled tickets) will serve bettors, the straightaway in front of Sandown's main stands will be extended from 330 to 440 yards to accommodate quarter horses.

In addition to the 23 horses entered in the Oaks, another 113 entries have been received for four major quarter horse races.

Hajnal concluded that his group (VIQHRA) "greater community involvment" in racing, and hopes to emphasize social niceties by introducing salmon and beef barbecues with the grounds.

Tonight's Rivals Evenly Matched

Predicting the result could be a difficult task tonight when two evenly-matched rivals — Claremont Spartans and Victoria Titans — clash at Royal Athletic Park to decide the Howard Russell Cup winner and the playoff champion of the Inter-High School Rugby League.

Spartans, the defending champions, have lost only one match out of 12 this season — a 6-0 decision to Titans.

The Vics also finished with an 11-1 record, suffering their lone defeat, by a 9-0 score, at the hands of the Spartans.

Veteran Casey Walt will be leading Claremont in an attempt to take the title for a third straight time. Walt played on both previous championship squads.

Spartans captured the cup last season with a 20-5 romp over Titans. Last year, however, Victoria's record was 4-4 and a playoff was needed against Oak Bay before Titans earned a berth in the final.

Saanich Victoria Take Puck Crowns

Victoria captured the peewee crown and Saanich nailed down the bantam title in regular-season play of the Lower Island Minor Hockey Association.

Victoria's Troy Richardson was leading scorer in the peewee representative division with 15 goals and 12 assists for 27 points. Murray McLaren of the Victoria Racquet Club, Larry Wright of Saanich and Geordie Robertson of Victoria finished in a tie for second place with 25 points each.

Brent Patterson of Saanich topped scoring in the bantam division with 24 goals and 29 assists for a total of 53 points. Larry Hansen of Victoria was runner-up with 50 points while Norm Allen scored 40 points for third place.

Legislation Urged to Protect Historic Sites and 'Old Town'

The provincial government should bring in legislation to protect historic sites and areas such as the Ashnola tower destroyed Tuesday and the "Old Town" area downtown, NDP MLA Bob Williams (Vancouver East) said Thursday.

He said the government has promised specific legislation to protect Vancouver's old Gastown area, but hasn't gone further than that.

GREAT POTENTIAL

Williams said that the great potential for restoration in Victoria is shown by the success of the few projects that have been undertaken so far, such as Bastion Square, "which could just have easily become a parking lot."

Williams said the Gorge Road Hospital board's decision to destroy the Ashnola tower and mansion on hospital grounds was "insane."

He did not accept the argument of deputy provincial secretary Laurie Wallace that the government couldn't save the onion-domed tower by declaring it a historic site because this would be interfering in a matter under city jurisdiction.

"I don't buy that they can't step in," said Williams, pointing out that they are planning to intervene in the case of Vancouver's Gastown, which is also within city's boundaries.

MAIN THREAT

The main threat that needs to be controlled here is high-rises, the MLA said. "Victoria has some of the ugliest high-rises in the world. Another James Bay in, say, the old town would be a disaster."

Provincial historic sites officer Bob Broadland said the government didn't want to set a precedent in intervening to save the Ashnola tower.

Under the present system, he said, the province "might co-operate with a community, but it can't take the initiative . . . it can't tell a community what to do."

Maybe people will learn a lesson from Ashnola, he said. "Hopefully they won't tear down the next one," he added.

Saanich Mayor Hugh Curtis, chairman of the Capital District Regional Baoard which oversees the Gorge Road Hospital's operation, said he hoped that "out of this will come some sort of procedure to save these things.

"We all should have been talking about this (Ashnola) six months ago — we knew that it was coming down."

NOT A HOPE

True Love Story Without Ending

By Jack Scott

"Please book me a good room for the entire visit," the note from London requested and I knew then that yet another chapter is soon to unfold in what I believe to be the most romantic, heart-breaking and enduring saga of unrequited love of all time.

Leonard has been in love with Elizabeth — hopelessly, madly, head-over-heels in love—for 20 long years, ever since that fateful night in the tree house. Yet they've never exchanged a word and are never likely to.

Leonard is in his early fifties now, a somewhat rotund, shy, self-effacing man, a long-time roving correspondent with one of Britain's greatest dailies, and, as you might expect, a bachelor.

Elizabeth is Her Most Excellent Majesty Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other Realms and Territories Queen.

Leonard will be awaiting there when Elizabeth steps down the gangplank of the royal yacht Britannia in Victoria Harbor on Monday evening, May 3. Leonard is always there when Elizabeth arrives anywhere, an adoring face in the crowd, pencil poised over his notebook, love bursting in his heart.

Scott

You will guess right away that Leonard is a dedicated monarchist. He is, in fact, nothing of the sort. He could not care less that Elizabeth is a sovereign. It never occurs to him to owe allegiance as a loyal subject. He is simply a man who fell in love with a woman, as men have done since the world began. Had it been any other woman he would have made his move. It was just one of those dirty tricks of fate that she happened to be a monarch.

I had covered two royal tours with Leonard, but it was not until a winter's night in 1959 at a whistle stop west of Revelstoke that I became a party to his secret.

It was long past midnight. We were the last correspondents awake in the press train that precedes the royal train, had finished our stories and were having a night-cap. The train slept, softly chortling and gasping, at this deserted siding. Snowflakes the size of a baby's hand were drifting down outside the window. Leonard suggested we take a walk before turning in and we bundled up and strolled down the platform through the falling snow. A sudden blinding glare of light told us that the royal train was pulling in behind ours and we walked on to watch its arrival.

As the royal train came to a halt we saw a figure alight from the farthest car and there was Elizabeth walking toward us. She wore a mink coat and a mink hat, jewelled with the enormous snow-flakes, and in the suffused light from the windows of the train her face was truly beautiful. Leonard and I stood aside with awkward nods and the Queen turned and gave us a smile that warmed the wintery night. I heard Leonard make a sound that was between a sigh and a shudder.

Back in our train he poured us two gigantic drinks and we talked through the rest of that night.

"I first knew that I was in love with her at Tree Tops at Nyeri in Kenya on the night of Feb. 6, 1952," he told me. "We were all up there, the royal party and a dozen or more correspondents, watching the jungle animals come down to the salt lick. Elizabeth was wearing a bush jacket and slacks. I remember. It was there, you'll recall, that she heard the news of her father's death. She wept, but she was wonderfully calm and brave. My heart went out to her. I wanted to put my arms around her to comfort her. And then it came to me that I was truly, deeply in love with a married woman, with a Queen, no less, and that it had become my destiny to go through life with that knowledge."

It was a bizarre, but by no means preposterous discovery. At 25 Elizabeth was a stunning woman. She remains so today. When you have been close to her, when you've seen the real woman beneath "the lily cast in steel," as an unkind writer once described her, you can no longer think of the word "radiant" as merely a journalistic cliche. Churchill called her "a gleaming figure." In that fresh, peaches-and-cream English beauty, that combination of inner gaiety and strength that seldom comes across in her ceremonial role, there's everything to which a romantic man might aspire.

As it turned out, I was to cover three more royal tours, myself. Leonard was along on each of them. Meantime, he'd been with her to Australia, India, the Caribbean and those other outposts of the vanishing empire on the trips that have made her the most-travelled of all sovereigns.

Once, when my wife and I went to watch Prince Philip play polo at Windsor, I saw Leonard standing there in the crowd near the box occupied by Elizabeth and Princess Ann. He was there, following her about with his notebook, all but sharing her pastel parasol, when I made it to my one and only garden party at Buckingham Palace.

I was there, too, by sheer chance, when Leonard had his only physical encounter with Elizabeth. It happened in Bermuda. We'd taken our places with the other correspondents on a quay where the royal barge was to arrive. It was an incredibly lovely day, cloudless to every horizon, the indigo sea sparkling and glinting, a day for lovers.

As Elizabeth alighted from the barge and came up the ramp from the quay I thought that I had never seen anything quite so lovely. She wore a sleeveless salmon-pink linen dress, a perky little white hat, white shoes and gloves and she looked as crisp and cool as the Bermudian breeze. That was a day we all used the word "radiant." There was no other word for her.

As she came abreast of us Elizabeth turned to say something to Philip, the toe of her slipper caught in the red carpeting and she stumbled. At once Leonard's hand shot out and his fingers lightly brushed her arm as she quickly recovered. Elizabeth turned to him with a grateful smile, a benediction in which there was not the slightest recognition.

It was then, I think, that I decided I must one day write the story. Even a Queen has the right to know that such a great love exists and perhaps to acknowledge it.

I like to think of her coming ashore here in early May, commanding Leonard to step forward from the crowd of correspondents where he will be standing with his pencil over his notebook and, lightly touching his shoulder with Philip's sword, there and then creating Sir Leonard. God knows, he richly deserves it.

No More Teachers! 'But Why?'

By SALLY GLOVER

School's out! ! !

Why?

"Why? I don't know."

"Strike — they're on strike."

On a tour of the city this morning, it was evident school was out even if some of the students were pretty hazy about the reason.

Most students, knew their teachers were on strike, but many said they were not told WHY by their teachers.

A group of Grade 5 boys playing hockey said, "Sure, we asked the teachers but they said, 'ask your mother or read it in the paper'."

Others said it was "something about the poor teachers not getting enough money" or "something about a pension cheque."

'KINDA MAD'

A girl about 15 said, "We discussed it in class yesterday and they're not getting enough pay and all that jazz. Like it's not an official holiday, but they asked us to help them so we did.

One high school student said he was "just told to stay away from school."

"I don't know why they're on strike and I don't care," said a giggling girl. "I just know we get a day off school."

A Grade 7 boy riding alone on Dallas Road, asked if he was glad to be off school said, sadly, "Oh no, I like school."

"Just because they go on strike, doesn't mean they have to get grouchy," said another.

Prof's Resignation Sparks Sit-In at Fine Arts Office

The three-man committee representing the national executive of the CAUT arrived at Uvic this morning. Meeting with Partridge were Dr. Don Savage, Dr. Leo Christiansen and Dr. Charles Bourne.

The CAUT has been investigating administrative procedures in denial of tenure to two assistant professors, Dr. William Goede of English and Dr. Tikam Jain of chemistry, and refusal of promotion for philosophy lecturer Toby Graff.

Meanwhile, fresh student discontent erupted overnight in Uvic's theatre department with the resignation of an international expert in developmental drama that sparked a sit-in at the office of Fine Arts Dean Peter Garvie and later the Student Union Building.

Associate professor Richard Courtney told students at a meeting late Thursday afternoon he was resigning from Uvic and had tentatively accepted an offer from the University of Calgary.

Courtney, popular among students as a lecturer, came to Uvic from a post at Trent Park College in England and pioneered a developmental drama program that has been imitated at 11 other Canadian universities.

He told students he had "no recourse but to resign" because the fine arts faculty at Uvic would not appoint additional faculty in the developmental drama area, which needs more teachers "to service students adequately.

"It is particularly tragic that the University of Victoria, which boldly began the area of developmental drama and has been followed by so many other universities, which has attracted high-quality students not merely from B.C. and every other province of Canada but from all over the world, should not be able to permit developmental theatre its natural growth at this time," Courtney told the students.

He told students he had attempted to protect those studying under his program by arranging with the University of Calgary to permit student transfers from Uvic at all levels of study without loss of credit.

When he had finished speaking a student rose and spoke to the assembly in the Phoenix Theatre.

●

The students took his suggestion; occupying the office of the dean of fine arts for two hours for talks with Garvie himself and theatre department chairman Dr. Ralph Allen.

Garvie told students, who packed his office wall-to-wall, that additional staff in developmental drama could not be appointed because there was not enough money.

"You are blaming the dean for a network of decisions that for the most part have been departmental decisions," Allen told the students.

Allen said he had basic differences of opinion with Courtney as to the value of developmental drama and voiced concern that Uvic was losing a high-quality faculty member.

Allen said there were "major reservations about the field" among other faculty members.

He was challenged by a student who said she had 40 years teaching experience and "I'm willing to balance that against any department head here." She said she had seen what developmental drama "can do with children."

At the student union about 100 theatre students declared the building occupied, took over student council offices and demanded the executive council of the representative assembly call an emergency meeting.

The executive council, chaired by Alma Mater Society president Ian J. McKinnon unanimously endorsed two motions passed by theatre students.

The first motion stated that students "strongly protest the conditions under which Professor Richard Courtney has submitted his resignation."

It protested: A disproportionate ration of teachers to students; the taking away of already poor space facilities; discontinuation of Courtney's graduate program; lack of theatre faculty support for developmental drama; lack of funds for necessary equipment; lack of adequate staff for the program; and "the ineffectuality of the chairman of the department and the dean of fine arts in meeting Professor Courtney's demands for the necessary expansion of his program."

●

The executive council followed up by unanimously endorsing a motion of confidence in Courtney and another motion that:

'Terminal' Appointments

University of Victoria announced this morning that of the five faculty members who have been offered new contracts, two were to receive "terminal" year appointments.

Dr. Ron Kirkby and David MacDougall will get the terminal appointments.

George Forbes, Sheila Hogg and Neil Thompson will all receive one-year extensions of their current contracts while a dispute between the faculty association and the board of governors regarding the position of senior lecturer is ironed out.

Beechey Head Hero Searches For Decent Rescue Boat

He intends to get the rescue boat so badly needed for the treacherous stretch of the Strait of Juan de Fuca that claimed two lives Saturday.

He intends to get it soon.

He began his campaign today, armed with $40 "some one stuffed in my shirt pocket" when he attended the funeral of one of the victims Thursday.

Brown, still shaken from the funeral, said:

"I've lived in that area for 55 years. We've been holding off that ding for a rescue boat. We can't wait any longer. Someone's got to get started — why shouldn't it be me?"

SMASHED ON ROCKS

Brown's 12-foot plywood boat in which he rescued Walter and Marjorie Wick and John and Helen Parris when the troller Janola capsized, is still smashed on the rocks, its motor broken.

The insurance company for Janola has offered Brown money to replace the boat. He intends to put this toward a 17-foot inboard and outboard fibreglass boat. The company selling the model is offering him a special price of $4,000.

Brown originally intended to auction off "all I have — my camper, motor bike — you name it" but people have persuaded him that this is a community concern. They want a part.

The Percy Brown Trust Fund was set up at the Royal Bank, Douglas and Saanich. The Victoria Daily Times will accept cheques for forwarding to the trust fund.

Brown hopes to get his battered boat off the rocks and show it together with the boat he thinks will do the required job, at various shopping centres.

Ask The Times

Q. Is there anywhere in Victoria where the course of becoming a dental assistant can be taken?—I.A.G.

A. No, but the course is offered at the Nanaimo and Prince George vocational schools.

Arthur Mayse . . .

ONCE IN A WHILE, I GO north to the country where loggers I knew as friends and rough-and-ready teachers brought the high woods down. Those rolling miles laid waste by the railway shows have come along pretty well in the years between, even though the prime timber that once clothed their ridges is gone.

There is more deciduous growth, and less evergreen. Here and there you may find grim evidence of soil burned to the bedrock. On such acres, even after a span of years, only the hardiest ground cover has rooted.

In the main, however — and seeing the picture through the eyes of a man who likes the old logging burns — those woods of my youth are less ruined than changed.

Their lakes still hold trout. The hawks still plane in leisurely circles overhead. I think they harbor more deer and many more grouse than they did when I summer-punked among their whale-backed sidehills.

This suggestion may affront conservation-minded folk who insist on regarding all areas through which the loggers have passed as deserts ravaged beyond healing. But I find those burns of long ago better recreation country than the tall green.

Far be it from me to suggest that British Columbia should continue to knock down her timber stands at the present uninhibited rate. More of such ancient woods as remain should be preserved. Perhaps also, under some future government, truly selective logging will become a fact, and complete utilization of logging waste a matter of economic necessity.

What I'm saying is that for sport and pleasure, I prefer country less dim and more open than the big timber that once marched from the sea to the foothills.

Those woods were grand, but spend time in them and they could become more than a little oppressive.

They were always very silent and lifeless-seeming. The sky was lost under their towering canopies, and no ground-breeze moved among their trunks. Their undergrowth, where it existed, was mostly all-but-impenetrable salal. Sometimes it grew chest-high or higher. I've heard old bush-rats speak of salal jungles so dense that they could make headway only by rolling over the wiry barriers.

A man can admire such woods from the outside. They were, and are where they linger, among the marvels of prodigal nature. Even so, my preference is for birdsong, breeze, and a wider sweep of sky.

In print and out, I'm a conservationist, which by definition is one who would have our natural resources put to the wisest possible use.

One of those wide uses — and God knows it is too little respected by a 'fast-buck' provincial government — is to spare, maintain and cherish. Where men and governments fail to do so, a sickness of the land and the spirit develop.

The thing to remember is that there are other uses which are also wise and necessary. Industry should not have its way in all matters. Neither should we entertain delusions that this province or this Island can be maintained as universal park-land. Population alone makes any such dream untenable even if it were desirable.

There's a balance to be struck. We can hope to achieve it if conservationists fight hard enough, and government listens, and industry accepts its share of responsibility for maintaining a decently livable environment.

And also if all who profess to be conservation-minded will be ruled by a definition that should be a way of thought and of life.

I'm not looking for a millenium. Just hoping for more of a commodity too rare in many of our human interchanges. Call it common sense.

Except to note that more of our big timber should have been spared, I refuse to mourn for those all-encompassing woods. The economy of a province demanded, and still does, that trees be sacrificed to man's use.

But with reservations and provisos which are better made late than never, and always with an eye to the wisest possible use of a natural resource.

It's a creed which, honestly applied, will permit us to have our cake and eat it too. Ignore it or breach it, and we can expect our troubles to multiply.

LIBERAL WOMEN VOTE . . .

Resolution Asks Government To Reconsider Free Buses

By ANN DUNSMUIR

Liberal delegates to the B.C. Women's Liberal Association arrived in Victoria by plane, car and ferry to pass a resolution Thursday urging that the federal government reconsider its decision to supply free bus transportation across Canada to young people this summer.

The resolution was put forward by the Lady Laurier Club of Vancouver.

Members speaking to the motion said that the government should not provide free transportation for transient youth so that "they can come here and live on welfare."

Another member described a young man living on welfare with "supposedly his wife," who had to have his fare paid back to Montreal at the B.C. taxpayers' expense.

Mrs. G. M. Beatty of the Vancouver Lady Laurier Club, said that she doesn't want to see buses full of transient youths coming to Vancouver and disrupting "all our centennial projects."

The motion carried in spite of a warning by the national president of the Women's Liberal Federation of Canada, Marie Gibeault, that cancelling free transportation might deprive many students of a chance to work under the federal government's plan to provide summer jobs.

The delegates passed a resolution urging that the B.C. government begin the teaching of French at the Grade 1 level in all public schools. Another resolution urged that a department of education television be established provincially and inter-provincially as a modern aid to education.

The Lady Laurier Club of Oak Bay put forward a resolution asking that the provincial government revise the cost-sharing formula to reduce the municipal share in the cost of education, welfare, health and hospital construction. This motion was carried unanimously.

A resolution urging that all levels of government set up programs for complete treatment of sewage and other waste materials with recycling of end products wherever possible also carried unanimously.

Mme. Gibeault installed the new slate of officers.

They are: Mrs. Dorothy K. Giles, president; Mrs. Helen Key, first vice-president; Mrs. Doris Thompson, second vice-president; Mrs. H. C. McFayden, third vice-president; Mrs. A. H. Ketchell, fourth vice-president; Mrs. H. I. MacKenzie, fifth vice-president; Mrs. C. J. Naughton, recording secretary; Mrs. P. Bergen, corresponding secretary; Mrs. G. Fallowfield, organizing secretary; Mrs. May Halliday, treasurer; Mrs. K. A. Hay, historian; Mrs. Lorna Cook, public relations.

Employees Applaud Hot Pants Uniform

TORONTO (CP) — If the department of public works' fashion show Wednesday is any guide, the fashion-conscious Ontario government plumber will wear a grass-green windbreaker and grey slacks this spring.

In a 30-minute show to display new department uniforms, the plumber was given a girl "helper" in a red, navy and white blouse under what started as cover-alls and ended in red hot pants. The helper was given the only spontaneous applause from an audience of about 100 civil servants, mostly men.

The public works department is trying to get away from the "policeman" look, even for its security guards, said the commentator.

For various employees, there were knickers, jumpsuits, midis, and gaucho pants.

Stewards in the members' lounge of the legislature and the press lounge will wear navy pants with a red stripe, white shirts and bolero-style red jacket. Hostesses will wear white pants and a white blouse covered with a smart red, white and blue sleeveless tunic that can be worn by itself as a dress.

The commentator said the department wants to be known as "the department of public service," not just as a "place of bricks and mortar."

Local Politics Explained

By ELIZABETH BENNETT

The University Women's Club was given a lesson on the more puzzling points of municipal politics when they met recently in St. John Ambulance hall.

Speakers were the two "lady mayors," Kay Grouhel of Ladysmith and Francis Elford of Oak Bay, and Saanich alderman, Edith Gunning.

Mrs. Gunning explained the move to regional government; Mrs. Grouhel explained assessment problems and Mrs. Elford spoke on the effect of the social assistance formula on the mill rate.

Mayor Grouhel said the easy-to-understand assessment formula instituted throughout B.C. in the '50s was a step in the right direction. It ensured equal property assessment of 50 per cent of the market value.

In 1966, however, an amendment was passed that limited the yearly increase to 5 per cent a year. It was intended, she said, to prevent greedy municipalities from increasing their tax dollar and was opposed by only one member of the legislature.

This limit was recently increased to 10 per cent.

OUT OF DATE

Municipal officials opposed the amendment, because it was based on the premise that all property assessments were up to date by 1966.

When her own district, Ladysmith, became a town and took over assessments, they found this wasn't so.

Complications arose when property values increased greatly. The municipalities can exceed the 10 per cent limit only if "structural changes" have taken place on the land.

She cited an example in her area of a piece of property that increased 150 per cent in value in one year.

As the assessment could only be increased 10 per cent, assessments of the other property in the area that had not increased in value had to be lowered to ensure that everyone was assessed equally.

This lowers the tax base, she said, and forces the municipality to raise the mill rate.

"The municipalities can only raise funds by taxing real property," she said. "The taxes pay for services we require, have become accustomed to and don't think we can do without."

WELFARE COSTS

Mayor Elford began by pointing out that social assistance is one area of municipal spending over which the local governments have no control.

In the past, she said, all welfare costs in the province were added together with the federal government paying 50 per cent, the provincial government, 40 per cent, and the municipalities, 10 per cent. This 10 per cent was paid on a per capita basis.

In 1968 this formula was changed. Everything remained the same but the provincial share of the bill dropped to 30 per cent, and the municipal share rose to 20 per cent.

In Oak Bay, she said, which has a small portion of the population on welfare, it means $104,000 came into the community through social assistance cheques last year while $275,000 was paid out as their share of the provincial total.

In 1967, she said, Oak Bay paid $70,000 which is approximately 1½ mills. Now the social assistance cost is about 5 mills.

As Oak Bay is so small, interviews for social assistance are handled by a social worker who comes to the municipal hall once a week to interview clients.

This set-up has enabled Oak Bay to discover several cases of welfare abuse. The municipalty also has a good record for finding jobs for welfare recipients.

Mrs. Elford would like to see more areas reducing their welfare rolls in these ways.

She also feels that parents who are able to should continue to support unemployed young adult children, even when those children have become alienated from them.

She pointed out that funds set aside for other projects, such as cleaning up coastal waters, were being used to meet the welfare bill in her area.

"I used to be a strong amalgamationist," said Edith Gunning," until the alternative of the regional board came along.

"It makes it possible to have the best of two worlds; to have both integration and decentralization."

Reorganization of local government had been necessary because of an exploding population and the pressing urban problems that consequently developed.

NO DECREASE

She explained that the rising costs of the regional board had not caused a complimentary decrease in municipal costs because so far most of the regional board's work had been in areas not previously covered by municipal governments.

She said that if the region took over something such as social assistance, now handled by the municipalities, there would be a corresponding decrease.

Amalgamation of the core municipalities was not a good idea, she said, because it would change the balance of power between urban and rural areas.

One improvement Mrs. Gunning suggested for Victoria's regional government would be a more direct election of board members.

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Last year while my husband was going with another woman he gave her a Swiss watch for Christmas. They had a fight in February and he broke up with her and asked her for the watch. She gave it to him. Now my husband says I can have the watch if I want it. It looks good as new. Should I wear it?—Not proud

DEAR NOT: Why not — if it keeps time. (Look inside. Maybe he gave the other woman the "works.")

DEAR ABBY: A high school girl (I'll call Alice) told me that she and another girl ride to school every morning with three guys. Alice always sits in the back seat between two guys. It's a small car and quite crowded. Alice says she doesn't wear a bra, and this one guy (I'll call him Rick) keeps putting his hands underneath her sweater and jacket and tries to feel her up without anyone else knowing it. Alice tries to push his hand away, but she can't push very far. Alice says she doesn't want to embarrass herself and everyone else in the car by making a scene, so she asked a counsellor what to do, and this counsellor told her to whisper into Rick's ear that if he didn't stop she would yell and cause a scene.

A counsellor also told Alice to try dressing "defensively," like a one-piece jumpsuit so Rick can't get to her.

What do you think of such advice?—Wondering

DEAR WONDERING: Not much. No girl should have to dress "defensively" to keep a guy from "feeling her up."

I would have advised the girl to konk the octopus on the noggin with her algebra book the moment she felt him getting fresh. And at the same time to yell in a very loud voice that he should keep his creepy paws to himself!

DEAR ABBY: I just read that letter from the GI who is overseas. He said, "After living a normal married life for three years, what is a young, healthy man supposed to do for his physical needs? After all, I'm only human."

You turned it around and told him to do exactly what you would tell his wife to so since she had the same problem. "Keep busy, stay sober, avoid temptation, write every day and pray a lot."

That was good advice, Abby. It also applies to me because I am a wife who is without her man now. My husband isn't overseas. He's in prison. And he has another three years to go. I'm also only human but I will remain faithful because I love him with all my heart. I pray a lot, and I know that God hears my prayers and will keep me strong and help me fight this loneliness.—His Wife

DEAR ABBY: The secretary who signed herself "No Guts," should have signed herself No Brains. She beefed to you about having to write her boss's thank-you notes and send out his Christmas cards. A really good secretary does all of this, and is in effect a social secretary to her boss.

"No Guts" should resign and move into the steno pool. That's her speed.—No Beefs

DEAR ABBY: So "Waco Woman" says her husband is just like all the other men. He would like a "change" once in a while. Well, ain't that lovely? I would like a change once in a while myself. And the change I would like is Paul Newman. But if my husband ever caught me with Paul Newman he would break my neck. I don't need to worry, however, because if Paul Newman wanted a change, he sure wouldn't pick me.—Dreamer.

What's your problem? You'll feel better if you get it off your chest. Write to ABBY, Box 69700, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069. For a personal reply enclose stamped, addressed envelope.

Best hunting for antique bottles in the Victoria area can be found on building sites in the older parts of the city. When old buildings are torn down and new foundations dug pioneer garbage dumps are revealed. Joan Bentryn is holding a black glass whiskey bottle made in the 1870s. Gerrard Bentryn found this particular site hard going. He had to dig through two feet of beach rocks and sand put down by the contractor to reach the top soil. The Bentryns, assisted by their five-year-old son Ian found a total of ten bottles including a round bottomed soda from Dublin, and an old Victoria medicine bottle. Bottles shown above are only a few of Mrs. Bentryn's collection. A flask shaped bottle behind the ceramic ginger beer bottle is from a Spanish ship sunk off the Florida coast. It is hand blown and is an example of the oldest type of bottle found. (Irving Strickland Photos)

Bottles Everywhere, But Nothing Left to Drink

By ANN DUNSMUIR

While most people try to smuggle bottles discreetly into the garbage, Joan and Gerald Bentryn happily carry home as many as they can find.

"An antique bottle collector has to be part archeologist and part treasure hunter.

"If we can't get permission to dig on a construction site we follow the dump trucks and dig where they dump the fill."

The young American couple has formed Victoria's first Antique Bottle and Glass Club. The club is dedicated to keeping unique B.C. glass in the province and promoting an interest in the history connected with early glassware.

Joan Bentryn, who sparked the formation of the club, beleives that a great deal of early B.C. glass is leaving the country with tourists.

"People have got hold of the idea that old bottles are valuable and collect them for this reason," she said. "They know nothing about early glass-making or the local history represented by items they buy and take out of the country. Most bottles have little real value apart from their interest as examples of a historical period."

She believes it is wrong to "amass early glassware" without understanding what a find means in terms of the period when it was manufactured.

"This is because Langley's made a superior sarsparilla and bottled it themselves," said Mrs. Bentryn.

She described another bottle with a camel stamped in the glass. "People have these bottles and don't know that the camel was the sign of Campbell's Drug Company in Victoria.

Mrs. Bentryn began collecting about 10 years ago in New Jersey. Her husband, a graduate student in geography at the University of Victoria, specializes in the collection of early ink bottles. They find that bottle hunting gets them out of doors as a family group and is the kind of recreation that even a very young child can share with his parents.

They found that in the United States the best hunting was in rural areas." Nearly every farm will have an old dump somewhere on the property," explained Mrs. Bentryn.

In contrast the best hunting in the Victoria area is in the city itself. When old buildings are torn down and new foundations dug, pioneer garbage dumps are often uncovered. The Empress Hotel parking lot turned out to be a treasure trove of old glass.

Excavations for the new sewer on Cook Street cut through several old dumps. Mrs. Bentryn missed that one and is praying the sewer will break down.

Early Vancouver Island glass was all imported.

"The West coast doesn't have the right kind of sand for glass making, explained Mrs. Bentryn.

Her bottle collection from the Victoria area has already revealed an interesting pattern. Early fruit jars originated in the U.S.A., whiskey bottles in Scotland and San Francisco, gin bottles in Holland and soda bottles in England.

The W. E. Rumming Company in Nanaimo imported a bottle with an inside thread and a metal screw-top like the ones in modern hot water bottles. The bottles were shipped empty from England as ballast and filled with soda in Nanaimo.

These distinctive bottles have been found in the northern gold fields, the B.C. interior and northern Vancouver Island but strangely enough not in the Victoria area.

In the eighteenth century the British government imposed an exhorbitant tax on liquor to raise funds for war. Disconsolant drinkers discovered that hundred proof alcohol with a few herbs added was classified as medicine and exempt from tax.

Bitters became a very popular drink and the custom was imported to North America with the early pioneers.

Another treasured medicine bottle once held a potent concoction of alcohol, cocaine and opium with a few herbs for flavoring.

"There were far more drug addicts in the 1800s than there are now," said Mrs. Bentryn. "But they didn't know it and felt fine as long as they kept sipping away from the tonic bottle. Soothing syrups for babies were full of opium," she said.

Mrs. Bentryn first planned to start an antique bottle collectors club, but when she called her first meeting a month ago 58 collectors of all kinds of old glass attended.

"We have collectors of glass insulators, fruit jars, Japanese glass floats, stained glass and pressed glass," she said.

The group was hastily renamed the Antique Bottle and Glass Collectors Club. Members hope to learn from each other and win community recognition for glass collecting as a form of family recreation.

Couple to Celebrate Golden Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Smith will celebrate their golden wedding Saturday.

Father M. J. McNamara will say Mass Saturday at 7 p.m., and a reception will be held later in the Queen of Peace parish hall, 849 Old Esquimalt Road.

The couple were married in the Church of Our Lady of Compassion, Westham, London, England, on March 20, 1921. After Smith left the Royal Navy after 13 years service in 1926 the couple emigrated to Canada and settled in Saskatchewan.

They have two daughters, Sister Marina, S.S.A. (Mary), New Westminster, and Mrs. J. D. Lee (Catherine) of Chambly, Quebec.

MPs' Wives Want To See the World

Some wives of members of the Commons northern development committee say they should. And the fuss they are kicking up about a proposed trip to Australia and New Zealand is causing quite a stir on Parliament Hill.

Northern Development Minister Jean Chretien invited the MPs to travel with him to Australia and New Zealand to see first-hand the programs these countries have for their original peoples.

The Ottawa Citizen reported that committee members were divided between those who wanted to take their wives and those who didn't.

The publicity angered Mr. Chretien to the point that he considered calling the trip off.

Several of the MPs scheduled for the trip vigorously deny the newspaper report.

They said they managed to arrange the trip to Australia because some generals are taking a government Boeing 707 and there are enough extra seats available for MPs.

But there just isn't space available for wives, they said.

The Boeing making the trip will handle about 80 persons.

Despite the denials, one person making the trip said Wednesday there is space for wives and there is a possibility that wives will go along.

One MP, commenting on the fuss, said:

'Female Jobs' Still Scarce

By ELIZABETH FORBES

Recent statistics show that some two-and-a-half million women in Canada are working today for pay. They represent roughly one-third of the working force and one-third of the female population old enough to work.

Forbes

Report of the Royal Commssion on the status of women reminds us that in 1901, only one in every six women worked. Today, it is one in every three.

The increase is caused mainly by the number of married women working. Nevertheless, speaking broadly, women still work in only a few occupations labelled "female," they earn less money than men, and rarely reach the top.

The commission report says that occupational segregation by sex is long-standing. Traditionally female occupations include that of secretary, typist, telephone operator, housekeeper, domestic and hairdresser. Traditionally female professions include elementary school teacher, nurse, dietician and home economist.

Librarian and social worker were once in this category, but today a growing number of men are entering these professions.

Strangely, although labor clamors for the rights of the working people, statistics show that only a small percentage of women belong to unions. And the greater number of these are in labor organizations in which women form the majority.

Number of women elected to office does not begin to represent their proportion in the total union membership. Nor is the proportion of women named to collective bargaining committees anything like the proportion of men.

AMBIVALENT ATTITUDE

Indeed, the commission report shows, "there is evidence that male unionists have an ambivalent attitude to women in the work world."

Today, there is wide acceptance — international, federal and provincial — of the principle of equal pay for equal work.

Yet, there is strong support for the claim that employers often go out of their way to make some slight difference in the job done by a man and that done by a woman in order to justify a difference in pay rate.

After all, it's extremely hard to prove that two jobs are "identical" or "substantially identical" and thus prove that the law has been broken.

In most provinces the complaint must be lodged by the employee. Many women would rather suffer injustice than risk the ill-will or perhaps the retaliation of the employer.

PRACTICAL BASIS

It is therefore contended that new federal and provincial legislation is required to establish a more practical basis for determining what is equal work.

Also that an aggrieved employee's complaint should be lodged by an agency or person acting for government, and the violation investigated by the agency administering equal pay legislation.

Glaring inequalities can be found in difference of treatment of men and women under the Canada Pension Plan — and under many private plans as well.

Take for instance the fact that a widow and dependent children of male contributors receive benefit payments without question, but the husband and dependent children of a deceased female contributor do not, unless the husband has been maintained wholly or substantially by the wife.

DEPENDENT TOO

Again, along the same lines, unemployment insurance regulations makes a distinction between the dependents of a male and those of a female. A woman can claim her husband as a dependent only if his income from all sources, including investment, does not exceed $25 a week.

A worker's wife is a dependant if her earnings and insurance benefits alone do not exceed $25 a week.

Finally there is the intolerable practice followed by some companies and organizations of requiring women to retire at an earlier age than men.

As the commission points out: "Women live longer than men, earlier retirement means a shorter number of years to earn an adequate pension and a longer period to live on it."

EXPLOSION ROCKS FORD OFFICES

LONDON (AP) — An explosion rocked the Ford Motor Co.'s administrative offices on the outskirts of London early today and first reports said a group of terrorists calling themselves The Angry Brigade claimed responsibility.

The blast occurred when the headquarters was virtually empty of personnel.

A woman telephoned the Press Association, said she was a member of the Brigade and added:

"We have just got Fords and we will do the rest later."

Whether this had any connection with the seven-week strike in Ford's 26 plants in Britain was unclear. Previous Brigade attacks were avowedly against "capitalist and government property."

Scotland Yard's Special Branch for National Security believes the group consists of diehard anarchists at the top, surrounded by a bunch of normally harmless cranks.

The explosion blew in the basement door and smashed windows. Nobody was hurt. The offices are 10 miles from the huge Ford Dagenham plant, plagued by labor unrest for years and now shut down by the strike, called to win higher wages that the men claim would give them parity with the scales of other big British automobile factories. It has cost Ford 91,000 vehicles and upwards of £70 million ($160 million).

The blast followed the pattern of previous explosions in which the terrorists were seemingly careful to avoid injuries to people.

Two months ago the Brigade set off two small bombs in front of the home of Employment Minister Robert Carr with a cryptic communique "we're getting closer."

Anonymous calls have threatened to kidnap Sir John Waldron, commissioner of Scotland Yard, and Enoch Powell, right-wing conservative party politician.

Other threats have been made against Victor Feather, head of the Trades Union Congress, and Peter Walker, environment minister in Prime Minister Heath's Tory cabinet.

Subsequently, police raided a hippie commune and arrested two long-haired men. The case is still pending on charges of conspiring to cause explosions and utter threats.

B.C. Grits Should Force Skagit Issue—NDP

Opposition Leader Dave Barrett said Thursday that British Columbia's five Liberal MLAs should tell the federal government they will sit in the legislature as independents unless Ottawa moves to end the Skagit Valley flooding agreement.

Barrett told the legislature it's time the B.C. provincial Liberals "put up or shut up" on the agreement which is based on an International Joint Commission deal between Ottawa and the U.S.

He spoke after Resources Minister Ray Williston repeated the provincial government's refusal to allow Ottawa to act as agent for B.C. in seeking an end to the deal.

B.C. signed an agreement with Seattle City Light company in 1967 which will allow the utility to flood 5,000 acres of the Canadian Skagit Valley to produce peaking power for Seattle.

Williston insisted that B.C. was bound by the previous IJC treaty to make a deal with Seattle. Liberal MLAs insisted he was not bound to make a deal.

The minister said Ottawa has asked B.C. to allow it to act as agent for B.C., but the province's position continues to be that whatever Ottawa does it must do on its own initiative.

B.C. does not want to be held liable for costs already incurred by Seattle in preparing the Ross Dam for the expected rising of the water levels, Williston said.

Dave Brousson (L — North Vancouver - Capilano) disagreed with Williston's estimate of $8 million plus interest as the amount B.C. would be liable for if the agreement was scrapped. Brousson said it would be closer to $5.5 million and he had a letter from a Seattle power official to support the case.

William Hartley (NDP — Yale-Lillooet) said the Skagit deal shows the B.C. government knows "a fast buck" and also argued that there was no need for the 1967 agreement to be signed.

Barrett issued his challenge to the Liberals to threaten to resign after noting that it appears the "ultimate authority" for changing the Skagit deal rests with Ottawa. The Liberal MLAs scoffed at Barrett's challenge.

Liberal Leader Pat McGeer said B.C.'s 1967 agreement to allow flooding of the valley was signed for "unbelievable terms."

The $35,000 a year that B.C. will get for 99 years in return for permitting the flooding adds to $3.45 million. Yet, he said, Williston has indicated it would cost the province between $6 million and $8 million to get out of the deal.

"You'd sell the family jewels for 99 cents and then complain it would cost us $1 million to get them back," McGeer said.

Gordon Dowding (NDP — Burnaby-Edmonds) said no amount of money will compensate for the flooding of the Skagit. And he predicted that the federal Liberals will allow the deal to go through.

Dowding also said it depressed him that B.C. would try to "bend the BNA Act" to allow American railways to haul B.C. coal but wouldn't fight to save the Skagit.

McArthur Rites Held

Funeral services were held this afternoon in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church for James A. (Jim) McArthur, Victoria branch manager for B.C. Hydro, who died Tuesday, aged 51.

McArthur, who lived at 3918 Woodhaven, had served with the company for 30 years, becoming department manager in 1952.

A charter member of the Victoria chapter of the National Office Management Association, he served as the branch's president in 1956 and 1957.

A native of Victoria, he attended Central Junior High, Victoria High, Victoria College and the University of British Columbia.

McArthur was president of the Victoria Lawn Tennis and Badminton Club from 1955 to 1960.

Victoria Schools Drop Fair Plan

Greater Victoria School District has dropped plans for holding a centennial fair for students.

The spokesman said each school will conduct its own activities between May 25 and 28.

Canadian Musicians DO Have a Chance

By VICTOR STANTON

TORONTO (CP) — Hagood Hardy proved his point Thursday night: There is an audience for live concerts by Canadian middle-of-the-road musicians.

More than 2,000 persons filled Toronto's Massey Hall to about three-quarters capacity Thursday night for a concert organized by Mr. Hardy, featuring his own five-member band, the Montage, the Dr. Music swinging group from last summer's CBC TV's '70 Music Machine series and the 22-man Boss Brass band of Rob McConnell.

Afterwards, Mr. Hardy, a vibraharpist and pianist, called the concert "an unqualified success."

"We didn't fill the house, but we sure didn't leave much of it empty."

It was the first time since any of the groups have been established that they have played a live concert in Toronto.

MAKING A POINT

Mr. Hardy said prior to the concert that one of the reasons for putting it on was to prove the appeal of middle-of-the-road music that has been largely ignored on the Canadian live-concert scene.

Usually, he said, concerts of this type have featured American artists, while Canadian musicians have been forced to spend most of their time out of the country to make their living.

Besides Mr. Hardy, the Montage includes Gary White of Edmonton on bass, David Brown of Hamilton on drums and vocalists Stephanie Taylor of Toronto and Lynne McNeil of Ladysmith, B.C.

Transit Brief Sidetracked

A transit union's brief calling for improved public transportation in Greater Victoria was rerouted to the Capital Region after arriving at the door of Victoria council.

A vigorous appeal by Ald. Peter Pollen Thursday to get the city to take the initiative in planning a public transit system was ignored by the rest of council's A Committee on the grounds that any transit planning must be done on a regional basis.

Transit chairman Robert Baird said the brief, prepared by the Amalgamated Transit Union, Division 109, contained "some good suggestions."

Baird said he thinks the B.C. Hydro transit system here is one of the worst I have ever experienced . . . I don't know why people put up with it."

URGENT PROBLEM

But he said "we can't go into it on our own."

Pollen told the committee that the question of public transit is "probably the most urgent problem that we have," adding that the "provincial government has shown absolutely no recognition" of it.

He said the city is spending millions of dollars on roads and parking facilities, but "we are not spending a dime — not one dime — on public transportation. Instead, the city is "subsidizing" traffic routes between shopping centres."

Pollen said the city should call a meeting of the area's MLAs as a way of impressing the provincial government.

ELIMINATE HYDRO

He said he had talked to Victoria MLA and Public works minister William Chant, who he said had agreed on the approach suggested.

He also said the city should move towards eliminating the B.C. Hydro from the transit operation, and putting it into separate authority.

"Everything Peter Pollen's said has been done," Mayor Courtney Haddock interjected. He said the provincial government had agreed to lend a hand and work under the city's traffic engineeirng department and that the province would pay part of the cost.

"What is not done is a hard approach to get the provincial government to assume their responsibility," Pollen said.

Pollen warned that Victoria would become another Seattle, where he said "an unorganized conspiracy" of the shopping centres had destroyed the city.

9 IN MEMORIAM

EVE — In loving memory of a wonderful husband and father, Evan J. Eve (Eddie), who passed away suddenly March 19, 1968.

A wonderful father laid to rest.
For each of us he did his best.
His place on earth no one can fill,
We miss you Dad and always will.
Although we smile and make no fuss,
No one misses you more than us.
What we would give if we could say,
"Hello Dad" in the same old way.
To hear your voice, to see you smile,
To sit with you and chat awhile.
You left suddenly, your thoughts unknown,

JACQUES COUSTEAU, 7 p.m., Channel 8, 7:30 p.m. Channel 7. "The Secrets of the Sunken Caves" explores the strange geological formations in the Atlantic and Caribbean known as blue holes. Long fascinated by these cellars of the sea, Captain Cousteau and the crew of the Calypso explore a circular hole, 8,000 feet in diameter near British Honduras and find stalactites, scientific proof that the cave was once above sea level. In the Bahamas, they find a series of complex underground pits connected to the offshore blue holes and Cousteau, 150 feet down, loses his guide line and almost his life.

* * *

PARTRIDGE FAMILY, 8:30 p.m., Channel 4. Bobby Sherman makes his first TV appearance in two years as a songwriter who wants the Patridge Family to record his songs. Wes Stern, an agent-turned-actor, plays the kooky lyricist he teams with.

* * *

NAME OF THE GAME, 8:30 p.m., Channel 5. "The Showdown" stars Gene Barry. Publisher Glenn Howard investigates the clay feet of a legendary Western hero. In flashbacks, Barry appears as a gambler of the old West. Guest stars are Jessica Walter, Warren Oates, Albert Salmi and Jack Albertson.

* * *

FRIDAY NIGHT MOVIE, 9 p.m., Channel 7, 12. (Rerun.) "This Property Is Condemned" (1966) stars Natalie Wood and Robert Redford as young lovers in a small Southern railroad town. Kate Reis is convincing as the bitchy, designing mother, Charles Bonson as the opportunist who plays mother against daughter.

* * *

NET PLAYHOUSE, 8:30 p.m., Channel 9. "Much Ado About Nothing" (Part II), stars Maggie Smith and Robert Stephens in the conclusion of the National Theatre Company production of Shakespeare's comedy about two quarrelling lovers.

* * *

ODD COUPLE, 9:30 p.m., Channel 4. Tony Randall (Felix) falls for a librarian (Marj Dussy) who really isn't. She's the star of an off-Broadway nudie called "Bathtub" and Jack Klugman (Oscar), who has seen the show, wonders how to break the news to his roommate.

* * *

LOVE, AMERICAN STYLE, 10 p.m., Channel 4. (Rerun). Milton Berle plays a husband confronted with the old boyfriend (Strother Martin) of his wife (Connie Hines). Arte Johnson and Julie Sommers star in a story about what a man will go through to get a date with a nurse. John Davidson and Brenda Benet play an ambitious mail clerk and an executive's daughter.

TONIGHT'S MOVIES

5:30, Channel 12: The Atomic Submarine (1959 Adventure) Arthur Franz, Dick Foran. Science fiction yarn.

8:00, Channel 8: Strategy of Terror (1967 Mystery) Hugh O'Brien, Barbara Rush. Made-for-TV movie about a journalist alerted to an assassination plot involving the United Nations.

9:00, Channels 7 and 12: This Property is Condemned (1966 Drama) Natalie Wood, Robert Redford. Brooding drama, suggested by a Tennessee Williams one-act play.

9:00, Channel 13: Double Feature: Nabonga (1944 Adventure) Buster Crabbe, Fifi D'Orsay. All the familiar jungle ingredients, including the fearless explorer, the beautiful jungle girl and the killer ape. 2. Boss of Big Town (1943 Drama) John Litel, Florence Rice. Good racketeer melodrama.

1:05, Channel 12: The Heiress (1949 Drama) Olivia De Havilland, Montgomery Clift. The celebrated B'way play based on Henry James' 'Washington Square' is brought to the screen with uncommon taste and skill.

11:30, Channel 7: Night Key (1937 Melodrama) Boris Karloff, Warren Hull. Karloff is a mild-mannered inventor in this one, robbed of his burglar-alarm system by an unscrupulous partner.

12:00, Channel 6: Strategy of Terror (See 8:00 p.m. Ch. 8).

YOUR HEALTH: Dr. Walter Alvarez

One of the commenest diseases is a big stroke, and much more common than big strokes are the little strokes, which for 40 years I have been studying and writing about.

I have for years been trying to get doctors to see that the little strokes are very common and cause most of the aging of older people. A little old lady once said about her little strokes, "Death keeps taking little bites of me." What she meant was that every time she had a frightening dizzy spell for a minute, she became a little weaker, a little more tottery on her legs, a little more forgetful, a little less able, and a little more fearful of getting about.

What has happened in the brain of a person who has had a little stroke is that one of the small arteries has plugged up, and as a result, the small section of the brain supplied by that artery has lost its function. Many patients know what has happened to them when a little stroke occurs. All I have to ask of a person who comes in complaining of perhaps weakness and indigestion, inability to sleep, and some abdominal pain, is whether his present symptoms came on him suddenly. Then he, or his wife, may remember that he was perfectly well until he fell out of his chair, or fell in the bathroom while shaving, and the distress and changes came after that.

In some cases, with a more severe little stroke or after several little strokes, the persons's brain may be dulled so that he will be so little aware of what is happening to him that the the doctor would be wise to talk with the man's wife. She may know perhaps the date and time of day when the "spell" occurred, and will say, "He had not been himself since then; his memory is not so good. For a while he didn't feel like going to work. And now he is irascible and hard to get along with and irritable."

In the case of a big stroke, the cause can be a large artery which is plugged, a hemorrhage from a ruptured artery, or less commonly, an embolus (a clot that formed perhaps in a leg vein and then moved up into the brain). If, after a big stroke, the person immediately becomes unconscious and remains unconscious for days, this is a bad sign, and death can soon come. If the person remains conscious, the outlook is much better. Today, with great efforts a physician and several nurses may keep a person alive for months or years, although there is no hope that he will ever again regain consciousness or be aware of what is happening to him and around him. Because his brain has been deprived of oxygen so long, many of the brain cells may have died and can never be replaced.

It is sometimes difficult to estimate how much permanent damage has been done by the stroke. When the person has lost the use of an arm and leg and his ability to talk, sometimes he can get these functions back quickly without much treatment. Some patients get great help from a physiotherapist who will teach the person how to carry out exercises that will strengthen the muscles. Sometimes a speech therapist can help greatly by teaching the person to talk again.

HOME GARDEN

Rich Soil Needed for Gourds

By HILDA BEASTALL

Ornamental gourds interest people of all ages, gardeners or not, for the fantastic shapes, markings and colors appeal to the adventurer in most of us.

Hilda

Gourds will grow in any warm sunny spot away from strong wind, whether it is a narrow border against a house, on a warm garage wall, or on a sheltered sunny balcony. When the fruits are ripened and treated, they can be crafted during winter into numerous items from simple dishes to primitive musical instruments.

After selecting a suitably warm spot, the second need to be provided is a richly composted soil. Only the humus found in composted materials will yield a soil capable of holding the moisture required in the early stages of gourd growing. If you decide to be a gourd grower this year, start now to gather old manure, seaweed, dried grass and raw vegetable scraps to make into a humusy soil. Balcony gardeners will need to work out a deal with a ground-level gardener.

Gourds like a warm soil, so the plants cannot go into the garden until June at the earliest.

You must first sow the seeds, in separate two-inch veneer plant bands five weeks ahead of that date.

Gourds come in large and small sizes. Each group belongs to a different plant genus, the larger ones (Lagenaria) usually requiring to be grown in a greenhouse to reach maturity with hard skins; while the smaller gourds (Cucurbita) belong to the same genus as the edible squash and marrow, and can be grown outdoors.

Outdoors here you can expect to grow the smaller gourds to maturity before frost if you start the seeds indoors before April 30.

Tripods of bean stakes or a sturdy wooden archway or trellis will keep the vines off the damp ground thus preventing the fruits from becoming blemished. Preferably the trellis is set into a warm sunny house angle, and the plants put out in June at the foot of the support. Encourage the vine towards the trellis with each day's growth until finally a stem is tied carefully to the support.

Gourds are equipped with climbing tendrils so don't have the trellis lumber more than about half inch thick, except for the main supports. Natural climbing will follow.

All gourds, and the squashes, too, like to germinate in a temperature of 75 deg.F. and then grow along at 65 deg.F. until ready to be hardened off gradually for outdoors; the range for gourd growth is from 57 to 115 deg.F.

In June we don't often reach any great heat but the plants will grow well as the days and nights get warmer. The long daylight of June encourages many male blossoms but few females, which are the gourd bearers. However, once we come to less daylight hours in July and August and lessened light intensity, more female blossoms form.

The theory of daylight length and light intensity affecting the production of cucurbits (cucumber, melon, squash, gourds) was put forward by E. J. Salisbury of University College, London, in his book The Living Garden. It would account for lack of fruits on these plants in the early summer and the quantities produced later in the season to the time of killing frosts.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By ERED L. KARPIN

A slogan that has persisted through the ages is "always cover an honor with an honor." As a principle, this slogan is a winning one, provided the word "always" is deleted. But, unfortunately, many players cling slavishly to the slogan in toto, and thereby lose contracts that should have been fulfilled.

In today's deal, our South declarer's unthinking adherence to the principle of covering an honor with an honor cost him his game contract.

Neither side vulnerable. South deals.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 NT	Pass	3 NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Jack of ♣.

West, with his hopeless hand, made a nice lead when he opened the jack of clubs, instead of the fourth-highest spade. Dummy covered with the queen, and East put up the king. When declarer permitted the king to win, East returned the four of clubs, South's ace winning. West now made another fine play when he "unblocked" with the club 10.

South next led the diamond queen, and took the finesse when West played low. After East had won this trick with his king, he cashed the high nine of clubs, felling his partner's eight, after which he took two more club tricks, thus handling declarer a one-trick set.

Declarer made a very poor play when he put up the board's queen of clubs on the opening lead. Admittedly, West might have been leading the jack from some K-J-10 combination, in which case the queen would have won the trick. But, by playing low from dummy, declarer could have guaranteed his contract.

South should have perceived that he was going to finesse in diamonds in such a manner that if West had the diamond king, the entire diamond suit would be brought home without the loss of a trick; and that if the finesse lost, it would lose only to East.

Hence, a low club should have been played from dummy at trick one. South capturing West's jack with his ace. The dummy would now possess the doubleton Q-5 of clubs.

The diamond finesse would be taken next, losing to East's king. No matter what the setup was in clubs whether west possessed the club king, or East—the board's queen of clubs would effectively prevent the defenders from cashing more than the club king.

Greg opened the little bag. "It's only got dimes and pennies in it," he said. "Don't look, but take out one coin."

Mike did just that. "See, Dad," he explained. "I drew a dime. How many pennies are there?"

"Here's a clue," replied Greg. "If I removed two more dimes and three pennies, the odds against you drawing a dime like that would become three times what they were."

ARABS FIRE ON ISRAELI JETS

CAIRO (CP) — Egyptian anti-aircraft guns opened fire on Israeli planes today for the first time since the Middle East ceasefire began last August, the official Middle East news agency reported.

The two Israeli planes — identified as Phantom jets — apparently were not hit. The agency said the two aircraft intruded over Egyptian positions at Port Fuad at the northern end of the Suez canal.

BULLET HOLES in a harbor gasoline storage tank, put there by a sniper late Thursday night are examined by police identification expert Red Brennan. The fire department said the shooting could have caused a "conflagration" in the harbor area. The tank belongs to Standard Oil, which delivered furnace oil to the struck Sandringham Private Hospital earlier Thursday.

Davis Urges N-Plant Power

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Canada's fisheries minister Jack Davis today proposed that a "Canada Corridor" be constructed to handle all gas and oil shipment from the Arctic, including Alaska.

Davis said he is "90 per cent sure that the building of a trans-Canada Corridor can begin in 1973."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the B.C. Liberal Party annual convention opening here today, Davis firmly opposed the Alaska pipeline and west coast route for American oil shipments, but said "billions of dollars" must be spent to protect the environment in building a Canada pipeline.

Davis also told the convention that nuclear power is "clean" power, and "single-purpose" hydro electric dams on the Skagit and on the Fraser "can be a mistake."

In any pipeline scheme, Davis said, "it is the pipeline company and the power commission which will have to do the calisthenics. They will have to tear up their drawings and start all over again if the biologist says that the route they propose to follow is wrong," and "dirty from an environmental point of view."

HARD AT WORK

He said the federal government is already "hard at work looking at the idea of a Canada corridor."

He said it is "far safer from an environmental point of view" to put a pipeline through Canada than over the Alaska mountains.

He added that "it makes sense both from an ecological and economic point of view."

RAIL LINE

"So why not push the idea of a Canada corridor from the outset? Why not build an oil line and a gas line side by side? Why not add a road and, possibly, a rail line as well?"

Davis said the Canadian Wildlife Service has been "quietly" looking for a good corridor route for two years and that it might take a "season or two" to confirm a route.

"But I am already of the opinion that an all-purpose, Canada corridor is feasible from an overall environment point of view."

The cost of protecting the wildlife will "run into many billions of dollars" but they will "have to be paid," he said.

On the proposal to send oil from an Alaska pipeline by tanker down Canada's west coast, Davis had this to say:

"No oil moving down our west coast. No American tankers passing under our noses in Victoria. No crude messing up the west coast of Vancouver Island. No opera-

Dismissal Embitters Anderson

By WAYNE MacDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Esquimalt-Saanich's outspoken pollution-fighting member of parliament, David Anderson, has been removed from the important Canadian-American inter-parliamentary committee.

Anderson claims he was deliberately ousted from the committee because he has rocked the party boat a bit — because he has dared to do what he thinks any responsible MP should do.

That is, he has taken a stand — in this case in opposition to giant oil tankers running down the British Columbia coast endangering precious coastlines — and he has received a lot of personal publicity for his efforts.

SENIOR IN RANK

This, he claims, doesn't go down too well with the brass of the Liberal party — with Prime Minister Trudeau; with the cabinet; and most particularly with other B.C. Liberal MPs, many of whom are senior in rank and years to the 33-year-old bachelor.

Being ousted from the Canadian-American interparliamentary group is close to being the last straw as far as the island MP is concerned.

After all, it is the United States and Canada that are involved in the oil tanker oil pipeline debate — the question of whether Prudhoe Bay oil should be shipped by an Alaskan Pipeline and west

City to Get Power Plant; N-Fuel Out

A $12 million thermal power plant will be built near Victoria within five years, Resources Minister Ray Williston told the legislature Thursday and at the same time ruled out the possibility of using nuclear power to generate electricity.

It was the first major statement on B.C. power development plans in recent years.

Use Fossil Fuels in New Plants

Both plants would produce electricity through steam heated by a fossil fuel such as natural gas.

Last February Premier Bennett announced he had asked Ottawa to help in the cost of constructing a nuclear plant near Duncan. The premier later said, however, the Island didn't need a nuclear plant because it is not slated for heavy industrial development.

About half the Island's power is delivered from the mainland in submarine cables running across Georgia Strait from Tsawwassen to Maple Bay.

Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said today he had no comment on the government's power plans for the next five years. Then he said the plans are only "stopgap measures".

Shrum said he has just returned from a conference in eastern Canada where the potential of nuclear generating plants was enthusiastically received.

Nuclear Plans Up to Government

Asked if nuclear plants would play a role in B.C.'s long-range power plans, Shrum said: "I don't know, that's up to the government."

Shrum is chairman of the B.C. Energy Board which currently is conducting a study into B.C.'s energy needs over the next 15 years. A report is expected within a year.

Other projects announced Thursday are:

Construction of a ninth generating unit at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam.

No Site Selected for Plant

Outside the legislature, Williston told reporters the Victoria-area plant likely will burn some form of gas, perhaps a new kind of butane or propane.

He said the site has not yet been determined, but said it would be closer to Victoria than to the Duncan area.

In addition to these projects, Williston said, negotiations between the government and the Alcan aluminum company in Kitimat are taking place regarding financing for a new powerhouse at the Kemano generating station.

If built, the plant would double the power supply in the area. Williston said plans to build a coal-fire generating plant in the East Kootenays have been shelved as a result of the negotiations with Alcan.

"We will produce as much hydroelectric power from non-polluting water situations as we can," he told the house.

Hydro Gets First Priority

That is the government's first priority, he said, and the next is to use thermal plants as power supplements.

Thermal plants do not have prominence in B.C.'s plans, he said, because they do not last as long as dams, and the cost of fossil fuels will continue to increase.

Speaking more generally, Williston told reporters that the terms of reference for the B.C. Energy Board's study of long-range provincial power needs have been expanded.

Under the direction of Jack Sexton, said Williston, the board has been instructed to study all areas of B.C. and make recommendations for developments on a five-year basis to cover power needs to 1990.

The board originally had been instructed to prepare recommendations for immediate needs as well as those to 1985.

"But we have had to make some decisions to meet our immediate load projects," Williston said.

Gunman Blasts 4 Holes In Harbor Gas Tanks

One tank, containing 4,275 gallons of unleaded gas, was hit three times and 536 gallons leaked out.

The other tank, hit once, contained 6,288 gallons of solvent and 191 gallons were lost.

Other tanks behind the front two were not hit.

The Standard depot contains about a dozen tanks with a capacity of 314,000 gallons of gasoline, 38,000 gallons of diesel oil, 16,000 gallons of solvent, when all are full.

The shooting occurred 14 hours after a Standard Oil truck delivered a full supply of furnace oil to Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, where employees have been on strike for almost six months in an attempt to get a first contract.

SANDRINGHAM

Alex Markides, staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees whose Local 1311 is on strike at Sandringham, said this morning he is "very disappointed" the shooting occurred and said the union has no knowledge of it "and we wouldn't take such action.

"Action of this nature helps no one," he said.

Victoria city police received a report of the shooting at 11:51 p.m. Their investigation is continuing.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said: "It was a serious situation and one that could have caused a conflagration in the harbor area."

There are a number of businesses in the area, including the Canadian government marine transport department, Nicholson Murdie Machines

MPs May Get $2,000 Hike

By VICTOR MACKIE
(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — An immediate raise in salaries for members of Parliament to $20,000 from the present $18,000 a year, was suggested to the Liberal caucus this week as a possible first step the government may take to improve their take-home pay, it was learned today.

AGREEMENT UNLIKELY

The government is also sounding out other party representatives in the Commons as to their reaction to a total indemnity of $33,000 to be effective in the next Parliament after a general election.

That proposal, greeted with some incredulity from some members of the opposition, would involve the establishment of a taxable indemnity of $25,000 plus a non-taxable expense portion of $8,000. The government would like to get

By DON VIPOND

Better than nine teachers out of 10 stayed away from schools in the Capital region today, strongly supporting their federation in its fight with the provincial government over pensions for retired teachers.

Only schools for the handicapped were staffed as the one-day strike called by the B.C. Teachers' Federation was underlined by a crowd of teachers at the legislature.

Local teachers were joined by both active and retired teachers' delegations from the lower mainland and groups from up-Island in what a local official termed "not a rally but a presence" to show legislators their concern.

Basic issue is the level of pensions for retired teachers. The provincial government, which administers the pension plan, has proposed increases but the teachers' federation says it's "not enough."

$10 INCREASE

The federation estimates the average pension of retired teachers is $2,500 a year. The government has planned increases of about $10 to $20 a month.

Last fall the teachers voted to strike if necessary for improved pension benefits. They left the decision with the executive which has called today's one-day walk-out.

NOT A HOPE

True Love Story Without Ending

By Jack Scott

"Please book me a good room for the entire visit," the note from London requested and I knew then that yet another chapter is soon to unfold in what I believe to be the most romantic, heart-breaking and enduring saga of unrequited love of all time.

Leonard has been in love with Elizabeth — hopelessly, madly, head-over-heels in love—for 20 long years, ever since that fateful night in the tree house. Yet they've never exchanged a word and are never likely to.

Leonard is in his early fifties now, a somewhat rotund, shy, self-effacing man, a long-time roving correspondent with one of Britain's greatest dailies, and, as you might expect, a bachelor.

Elizabeth is Her Most Excellent Majesty Elizabeth the Second, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland and of her other Realms and Territories Queen.

Leonard will be awaiting there when Elizabeth steps down the gangplank of the royal yacht Britannia in Victoria Harbor on Monday evening, May 3. Leonard is always there when Elizabeth arrives anywhere, an adoring face in the crowd, pencil poised over his notebook, love bursting in his heart.

Scott

You will guess right away that Leonard is a dedicated monarchist. He is, in fact, nothing of the sort. He could not care less that Elizabeth is a sovereign. It never occurs to him to owe allegiance as a loyal subject. He is simply a man who fell in love with a woman, as men have done since the world began. Had it been any other woman he would have made his move. It was just one of those dirty tricks of fate that she happened to be a monarch.

I had covered two royal tours with Leonard, but it was not until a winter's night in 1959 at a whistle stop west of Revelstoke that I became a party to his secret.

It was long past midnight. We were the last correspondents awake in the press train that precedes the royal train, had finished our stories and were having a night-cap. The train slept, softly chortling and gasping, at this deserted siding. Snowflakes the size of a baby's hand were drifting down outside the window. Leonard suggested we take a walk before turning in and we bundled up and strolled down the platform through the falling snow. A sudden blinding glare of light told us that the royal train was pulling in behind ours and we walked on to watch its arrival.

As the royal train came to a halt we saw a figure alight from the farthest car and there was Elizabeth walking toward us. She wore a mink coat and a mink hat, jewelled with the enormous snow-flakes, and in the suffused light from the windows of the train her face was truly beautiful. Leonard and I stood aside with awkward nods and the Queen turned and gave us a smile that warmed the wintery night. I heard Leonard make a sound that was between a sigh and a shudder.

Back in our train he poured us two gigantic drinks and we talked through the rest of that night.

"I first knew that I was in love with her at Tree Tops at Nyeri in Kenya on the night of Feb. 6, 1952," he told me. "We were all up there, the royal party and a dozen or more correspondents, watching the jungle animals come down to the salt lick. Elizabeth was wearing a bush jacket and slacks, I remember. It was there, you'll recall, that she heard the news of her father's death. She wept, but she was wonderfully calm and brave. My heart went out to her. I wanted to put my arms around her to comfort her. And then it came to me that I was truly, deeply in love with a married woman, with a Queen, no less, and that it had become my destiny to go through life with that knowledge."

It was a bizarre, but by no means preposterous discovery. At 25 Elizabeth was a stunning woman. She remains so today. When you have been close to her, when you've seen the real woman beneath "the lily cast in steel," as an unkind writer once described her, you can no longer think of the word "radiant" as merely a journalistic cliche. Churchill called her "a gleaming figure." In that fresh, peaches-and-cream English beauty, that combination of inner purity and strength that seldom comes across in her ceremonial role, there's everything to which a romantic man might aspire.

As it turned out, I was to cover three more royal tours, myself. Leonard was along on each of them. Meantime, he'd been with her to Australia, India, the Caribbean and those other outposts of the vanishing empire on the trips that have made her the most-travelled of all sovereigns.

Once, when my wife and I went to watch Prince Philip play polo at Windsor, I saw Leonard standing there in the crowd near the box occupied by Elizabeth and Princess Ann. He was there, following her about with his notebook, all but shining her pastel parasol, when I made it to my one and only garden party at Buckingham Palace.

I was there, too, by sheer chance, when Leonard had his only physical encounter with Elizabeth. It happened in Bermuda. We'd taken our places with the other correspondents on a quay where the royal barge was to arrive. It was an incredibly lovely day, cloudless to every horizon, the indigo sea sparkling and glinting, a day for lovers.

As Elizabeth alighted from the barge and came up the ramp from the quay I thought that I had never seen anything quite so lovely. She wore a sleeveless salmon-pink linen dress, a perky little white hat, white shoes and gloves and she looked as crisp and cool as the Bermudian breeze. That was a day we all used the word "radiant." There was no other word for her.

As she came abreast of us Elizabeth turned to say something to Philip, the toe of her slipper caught in the red carpeting and she stumbled. At once Leonard's hand shot out and his fingers lightly brushed her arm as she quickly recovered. Elizabeth turned to him with a grateful smile, a benediction in which there was not the slightest recognition.

It was then, I think, that I decided I must one day write the story. Even a Queen has the right to know that such a great love exists and perhaps to acknowledge it.

I like to think of her coming ashore here in early May, commanding Leonard to step forward from the crowd of correspondents where he will be standing with his pencil over his notebook and, lightly touching his shoulder with Philip's wand, there and then creating Sir Leonard. God knows, he richly deserves it.

No More Teachers! 'But Why?'

By SALLY GLOVER

School's out! ! !

Why?.

"Why? I don't know."

"Strike — they're on strike."

On a tour of the city this morning, it was evident school was out even if some of the students were pretty hazy about the reason.

Most students knew their teachers were on strike, but many said they were not told WHY by their teachers.

A group of Grade 5 boys playing hockey said, "Sure, we asked the teachers but they said, 'ask your mother or read it in the paper'."

Others said it was "something about the poor teachers not getting enough money" or "something about a pension cheque."

'KINDA MAD'

A girl about 15 said, "We discussed it in class yesterday and they're not getting enough pay and all that jazz. Like it's not an official holiday, but they asked us to help them so we did.

One high school student said he was "just told to stay away from school."

"I don't know why they're on strike and I don't care," said a giggling girl. "I just know we get a day off school."

A Grade 7 boy riding alone on Dallas Road, asked if he was glad to be off school said, sadly, "Oh no, I like school."

"Just because they go on strike, doesn't mean they have to get grouchy," said another.

Prof's Resignation Sparks Sit-In at Fine Arts Office

The three-man committee representing the national executive of the CAUT arrived at Uvic this morning. Meeting with Partridge were Dr. Don Savage, Dr. Leo Christiansen and Dr. Charles Bourne.

The CAUT has been investigating administrative procedures in denial of tenure to two assistant professors, Dr. William Goede of English and Dr. Tikam Jain of chemistry, and refusal of promotion for philosophy lecturer Toby Graff.

Meanwhile, fresh student discontent erupted overnight in Uvic's theatre department with the resignation of an international expert in developmental drama that sparked a sit-in at the office of Fine Arts Dean Peter Garvie and later the student union building.

Associate professor Richard Courtney told students at a meeting late Thursday afternoon he was resigning from Uvic and had tentatively accepted an offer from the University of Calgary.

Courtney, popular among students as a lecturer, came to Uvic from a post at Trent Park College in England and pioneered a developmental drama program that has been imitated at 11 other Canadian universities.

He told students he had "no recourse but to resign" because the fine arts faculty at Uvic would not appoint additional faculty in the developmental drama area, which needs more teachers "to service students adequately.

"It is particularly tragic that the University of Victoria, which boldly began the area of developmental drama and has been followed by so many other universities, which has attracted high-quality students not merely from B.C. and every other province of Canada but from all over the world, should not be able to permit developmental theatre its natural growth at this time," Courtney told the students.

He told students he had attempted to protect those studying under his program by arranging with the University of Calgary to permit student transfers from Uvic at all levels of study without loss of credit.

When he had finished speaking a student rose and spoke to the assembly in the Phoenix Theatre.

The students took his suggestion, occupying the office of the dean of fine arts for two hours for talks with Garvie himself and theatre department chairman Dr. Ralph Allen.

Garvie told students, who packed his office wall-to-wall, that additional staff in developmental drama could not be appointed because there was not enough money.

"You are blaming the dean for a network of decisions that for the most part have been departmental decisions," Allen told the students.

Allen said he had bona fide differences of opinion with Courtney as to the value of developmental drama and voiced concern that Uvic was losing a high-quality faculty member.

Allen said there were "major reservations about the field" among other faculty members.

He was challenged by a student who said she had 40 years teaching experience and "I'm willing to balance that against any department head here." She said she had seen what developmental drama "can do with children."

At the student union about, 100 theatre students declared the building occupied, took over student council offices and demanded the executive council of the representative assembly call an emergency meeting.

The executive council, chaired by Alma Mater Society president Ian J. McKinnon unanimously endorsed two motions passed by theatre students.

The first motion stated that students "strongly protest the conditions under which Professor Richard Courtney has submitted his resignation."

It protested: A disproportionate ration of teachers to students; the taking away of already poor space facilities; discontinuation of Courtney's graduate program; lack of theatre faculty support for developmental drama; lack of funds for necessary equipment; lack of adequate staff for the program; and "the ineffectuality of the chairman of the department and the dean of fine arts in meeting Professor Courtney's demands for the necessary exposion of his program."

●

The executive council followed up by unanimously endorsing a motion of confidence in Courtney and another motion that:

'Terminal' Appointments

University of Victoria announced this morning that of the five faculty members who have been offered new contracts, two were to receive "terminal" year appointments.

George Forbes, Sheila Hogg and Neil Thompson will all receive one-year extensions of their current contracts while a dispute between the faculty association and the board of governors regarding the position of senior lecturer is ironed out.

Beechey Head Hero Searches For Decent Rescue Boat

He intends to get the rescue boat so badly needed for the treacherous stretch of the Strait of Juan de Fuca that claimed two lives Saturday.

He intends to get it soon.

He began his campaign today, armed with $40 "someone stuffed in my shirt pocket" when he attended the funeral of one of the victims Thursday.

Brown, still shaken from the funeral, said:

"I've lived in that area for 55 years. We've been holding off that long for a rescue boat. We can't wait any longer. Someone's got to get started — why shouldn't it be me?"

SMASHED ON ROCKS

Brown's 12-foot plywood boat in which he rescued Walter and Marjorie Wick and John and Helen Parris when the troller Janola capsized, is still smashed on the rocks, its motor broken.

The insurance company for Janola have offered Brown money to replace the boat. He intends to put this toward a 17-foot inboard and outboard fibreglass boat. The company selling the model is offering him a special price of $4,000.

Brown originally intended to auction off "all I have — my camper, motor bike — you name it" but people have persuaded him that this is a community concern. They want a part.

The Percy Brown Trust Fund was set up at the Royal Bank, Douglas and Saanich. The Victoria Daily Times will accept cheques for forwarding to the trust fund.

Brown hopes to get his battered boat off the rocks and show it, together with the boat he thinks will do the required job, at various shopping centres.

Q. Is there anywhere in Victoria where the course of becoming a dental assistant can be taken?—I.A.G.

ONCE IN A WHILE, I GO north to the country where loggers I knew as friends and rough-and-ready teachers brought the high woods down. Those rolling miles laid waste by the railway shows have come along pretty well in the years between, even though the prime timber that once clothed their ridges is gone.

There is more deciduous growth, and less evergreen. Here and there you may find grim evidence of soil burned to the bedrock. On such acres, even after a span of years, only the hardiest ground cover has rooted.

In the main, however — and seeing the picture through the eyes of a man who likes the old logging burns — those woods of my youth are less ruined than changed.

Their lakes still hold trout. The hawks still plane in leisurely circles overhead. I think they harbor more deer and many more grouse than they did when I summer-punked among their whale-backed sidehills.

This suggestion may affront conservation-minded folk who insist on regarding all areas through which the loggers have passed as deserts ravaged beyond healing. But I find those burns of long ago better recreation country than the tall green.

Far be it from me to suggest that British Columbia should continue to knock down her timber stands at the present unhibited rate. More of such ancient woods as remain should be preserved. Perhaps also, under some future government, truly selective logging will become a fact, and complete utilization of logging waste a matter of economic necessity.

What I'm saying is that for sport and pleasure, I prefer country less dim and more open than the big timber that once marched from the sea to the foothills.

Those woods were grand, but spend time in them and they could become more than a little oppressive.

They were always very silent and lifeless-seeming. The sky was lost under their towering canopies, and no ground-breeze moved among their trunks. Their undergrowth, where it existed, was mostly all-but-impenetrable salal. Sometimes it grew chest-high or higher. I've heard old bush-rats speak of salal jungles so dense that they could make headway only by rolling over the wiry barriers.

A man can admire such woods from the outside. They were, and are where they linger, among the marvels of prodigal nature. Even so, my preference is for birdsong, breeze, and a wider sweep of sky.

In print and out, I'm a conservationist, which by definition is one who would have our natural resources put to the wisest possible use.

One of those wide uses — and God knows it is too little respected by a fast-buck, provincial government — is to spare, maintain and cherish. Where men and governments fail to do so, a sickness of the land and the spirit develop.

The thing to remember is that there are other uses which are also wise and necessary. Industry should not have its way in all matters. Neither should we entertain delusions that this province or this Island can be maintained as universal park-land. Population alone makes any such dream untenable even if it were desirable.

There's a balance to be struck. We can hope to achieve it if conservationists fight hard enough, and government listens, and industry accepts its share of responsibility for maintaining a decently livable environment.

And also if all who profess to be conservation-minded will be ruled by a definition that should be a way of thought and of life.

I'm not looking for a millenium. Just hoping for more of a commodity too rare in many of our human interchanges. Call it common sense.

Except to note that more of our big timbers should have been spared, I refuse to mourn for those all-encompassing woods. The economy of a province demanded, and still does, that trees be sacrificed to man's use.

But with reservations and provisos which are better made late than never, and always with an eye to the wisest possible use of a natural resource.

It's a creed which, honestly applied, will permit us to have our cake and eat it too. Ignore it or breach it, and we can expect our troubles to multiply.

Mass rally scheduled for today as CAUT sends in committee to meet Partridge

Student Art For Display

Students from the Institute of Adult Studies will display arts, crafts and hobbies April 3, from 1 to 9 p.m. and April 4 from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.

Students and Faculty To Get Strong Voice

Students and faculty members will have a strong voice on an advisory committee to be set up at Camosun College, according to a proposal to the college council from the president Dr. Grant Fisher.

Make-up of the committee as outlined at a college council meeting Thursday will include nine faculty members, seven students and six members of the administration.

"My general thinking is that no one segment should have a dominant voice," Fisher said in an interview today.

The committee will make recommendations to the college council, but will not have any policy-making authority.

"I participated in the development of a committee like this at Red Deer College," the new principal said.

Fisher said Thursday he hoped the committee could begin functioning as soon as faculty members have been appointed. Arrangements for hiring have not yet been made, he said.

5 DEPARTMENTS

The five departments are student and supporting services; community services, science and technology, business, and liberal and applied arts.

There will also be a director of instructional development and an administrative assistant.

The directors of science and technology and liberal arts will be required to teach a quarter of their time.

The business and student services directors will teach about half of their time.

In a written statement to the college council, Fisher said administrators' teaching duties will selp maintain their "sensitivity to instructional needs."

Bury Wires to Save Views, Oak Bay Asks

Two developers, John Graeme and Terry Farmer, who own property near Walbran Park in Oak Bay, will be asked to put wiring underground to save the sea views and vista of the area.

Oak Bay council's B committee decided to approach the developers Thursday after Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Jones of 247 Denison appeared in an effort to save the park-like atmosphere.

Municipal engineer Geoffrey White said there are five lots involved and estimated that underground wiring would cost about $8,000.

Ald. Brian Smith, noting that the developers couldn't be compelled to put wiring underground under the existing law, added: "It's almost axiomatic these days that the trend is to upderground lines."

DAMNED UGLY

He described overhead wiring and poles as "damned ugly."

Ald. John Goult observed the $27,500 being asked for some of the lots was "a pretty hefty price." Ald. Douglas Watts added, "Except, right now they're not selling."

White presented his annual report and estimated 1971 budget for maintenance costs in the municipality. The total of $785,185 was later increased by another $1,000 for screens to protect windows in the Windsor Park Pavilion. This is an increase of $41,879 over 1970 expenses.

Watts, noting that the total is close to $800,000, said the increases are unavoidable because of inflation and rising costs.

Adding to increased costs are: An additional $15,200 for parks and maintenance, an increase of $5,800 in salaries for a temporary draftsman and engineering assistants, a budget of $10,000 for snow removal, an extra $1,500 for tree cutting, and $1,500 for maintenance of radios supplied by Civil Defence.

In other business the committee decided to tour various streets in Oak Bay to check priorities on roadwork.

Admiral To Speak

Rear-Admiral Desmond Hoare, personal representative of Admiral of the Fleet, Earl Mountbatten, will be guest speaker next Friday at a meeting in CFB Esquimalt.

Fresh from visits to India and Singapore, he will speak on establishing of United World colleges at a meeting of the United Services Institute of Vancouver Island, to be held in the old gymnasium at 8 p.m.

Mountbatten heads the project, which is based on the concept of using education as a means of promoting international understanding.

Hoare was in Singapore to check plans for a college which will be established there, similar to the one planned for the Vancouver Island area in 1973.

Hoare arrives Wednesday and will be guest of honor at a dinner to be given by Maj.-Gen. George Pearkes on Thursday.

Hunt's On For 1878 Cannon

Treasure hunters hope to unearth an old cannon dating back to the Russian war scare of 1878 during a hunt of the B.C.'s legislative buildings Saturday morning.

Decades-old rumors of old guns buried behind the old Menzies Street drill hall, now the motor vehicles branch, were revived recently when a metal detector indicated a mass of metal where the guns are supposedly hidden.

J. R. Rippengale, superintendent of Fort Rodd Hill, says recovery of such equipment for display purposes at the old fort would be "a fabulous start for centennial year."

He adds: "The only way to find out what is down there is to open the ground and have a look.

"From the description given me by the late Don McDowell, a grand old gentleman, we could find a 64-pounder of the kind mounted at Finlayson Point, Victoria Point and Brothers Island at the time of the Russian war scare of 1878."

A backhoe and other equipment will be used for Saturday's dig which has been approved by the public works department.

John Howard Chairman Named

Vic-chairmen are Mrs. K. Greenwood and H. B. Dick and treasurer is P. Chesshire. Immediate past chairman is M. P. Paine.

Before the Judge

A Maritimer who has been in Victoria a year pleaded guilty in provincial court Wednesday to shoplifting clothing worth $200 from Woodward's, Eaton's and The Bay.

Warren T. Croscup, formerly a Nova Scotian, was remanded by Judge William Ostler to March 26 for presentence report and sentence. He told court he had lifted the items because he "wanted extra clothing."

Stolen were three pairs of trousers worth $59.85 from Woodward's March 17, a suit valued at $59.97 from The Bay March 13, trousers worth $53.90 from The Bay March 15, and trousers worth $26.95 from Eaton's Feb. 1.

★ ★ ★

Kenneth J. Ashcroft, convicted of committing an indictable offence while on parole, was ordered back to prison to complete his term in addition to any sentence he might receive for the new offence.

★ ★ ★

Frederick Young, who is undergoing psychiatric treatment, pleaded guilty to a charge of perjury in connection with evidence he gave at a Jan 6 trial in which another man was accused of having a loaded rifle in his car.

Saanich police said Young testified he had bought a gun from a department store and found when he got it home it contained a live round of ammunition. The accused's defence in the Jan. 6 trial also had been that he didn't know the gun was loaded.

Evidence showed Young didn't know the accused in the earlier trial, and tendered the false testimony "because he felt sorry for him."

Young was released on his recognizance, pending his appearance for pre-sentence report and sentence March 30, and will continue psychiatric treatment.

John J. Bereczk, whose presentence report showed he was a "persistent thief," was sentenced to six months in jail for shoplifting.

Meeting Planned On Sandringham

An Announcement

On Saturday (Bonus Day) Miss Frith Fabrics and The Treasure Chest will be offering fabulous bargains. After Saturday, the tag ends from each will be available in our "No Name" store. At least for the present it will have "no name" but we'll have a contest to name it very soon! However, we are making the mezzanine of 1623 Douglas available to various deserving agencies in Victoria to display their crafts and sell them. The agencies are, Arbutus Craft, Begbie Guest Home, Greater Victoria Association for the Retarded and the Canadian Mental Health Association. We hope you will pay them a visit.

In the meantime we are proceeding with our plans to set up a special store for Junior stylings with fashions that will appeal especially to the younger set in high school, university and the young business girl. We'll be open Monday. Watch for our "name" contest won't you?

Our new Corolla.
Luxurious accommodation for four.

We finally did it. We made a 4 door Corolla. We did it for people who might prefer not to fight their way around the front seat. And especially for people with children.

Besides the 4 doors you get a 102 hp engine, over 30 miles per gallon, power-assisted front disc brakes and a 4-speed synchromesh transmission. (The automatic is optional).

Inside the doors you get fully reclining bucket seats, carpeting, tinted glass, an electric rear window defroster and plenty of quiet (providing you aren't one of the people with children).

But the most beautiful door is the one with the sticker in the window. Because on that sticker, following a long list of standard equipment, is one of the most beautiful things about a Toyota—the price. Corollas start at under $2,000. Sandringham Picket Hit

Man Carried For 40 Feet

By DOUG MacRAE

A volunteer picket at the struck Sandringham Private Hospital was slammed into and carried 40 feet on the hood of a Island Security Patrol car at 1:15 p.m. today.

John Reid, 51, of 2511 Dowler Place, injured his left hand slightly in the incident.

Reid, a welder, was a volunteer picket and was walking alone last in a line of marchers on the sidewalk at the entrance to the hospital at 1650 Fort Street.

It was Reid's first day on volunteer picket duty. He had been on the line only 15 minutes when the incident occurred.

As he fell to the ground a second security guard with a dog rushed over to him and shouted, according to Reid, "Hey, you're not supposed to be on this property."

Reid said the small green and white imported station wagon driven by the security officer was stopped at the sidewalk. The car started up "and ran into me," said Reid.

Reid said he was sliding off the hood and was in danger of being run over before he grabbed the windshield wiper, injuring his hand.

EYE WITNESS

Murray Drew, who is president of the Victoria local of the International Woodworkers of America, was an eye-witness.

He said the patrol car, which was travelling on Fort Street towards Oak Bay, crossed the solid white line and drove into the hospital running into the man who was walking by.

In an incident last weekend strikers reported two pickets were bowled over by a car in the hospital parking area.

A hospital spokesman also said a nurse and two nursing aides were blocked when leaving and entering the building. One of the women was held by the arm by a picket, the spokesman said.

Charges were being considered by both sides.

LAY CHARGE?

Alex Markides, field representative of the Canadian Union of Public Employees, said the next step would be for the city prosecutor to lay an assault charge against the driver.

It's "not as if nobody saw the thing, Markides said. "There were a great many witnesses.

There's got to be some action taken. There's no way we can have security guards and dogs pushing pickets around just because they've got a uniform on."

Larry Ryan, secretary-treasurer of the Victoria Labor Council, saw today's incident as another indication of "escalating violence" on the city labor scene.

Ryan referred to the incident last night in which a

BULLET HOLES in a harbor gasoline storage tank, put there by a sniper late Thursday night are examined by police identification expert Red Brennan. The fire department said the shooting could have caused a "conflagration" in the harbor area. The tank belongs to Standard Oil, which delivered furnace oil to the struck Sandringham Private Hospital earlier Thursday.

Trans-Canada Corridor To Tap Arctic

By CLEMENT CHAPPLE

Canada's fisheries minister Jack Davis today proposed that a "Canada Corridor" be constructed to handle all gas and oil shipment from the Arctic, including Alaska.

Davis said he is "90 per cent sure that the building of a trans-Canada corridor can begin in 1973."

In a speech prepared for delivery to the B.C. Liberal Party annual convention opening here today, Davis firmly opposed the Alaska pipeline and west coast route for American oil shipments., but said "billions of dollars" must be spent to protect the environment in building a Canada pipeline.

Davis also told the convention that nuclear power is "clean" power, and "single-purpose" hydro electric dams on the Skagit and on the Fraser "can be a mistake."

In any pipeline scheme, Davis said, "it is the pipeline company and the power commission which will have to do the calisthenics. They will have to tear up their drawings and start all over again if the biologist says that the route they propose to follow is wrong," and "dirty from an environmental point of view."

HARD AT WORK

He said the federal government is already "hard at work looking at the idea of a Canada corridor."

He said it is "far safer from an environmental point of view" to put a pipeline through Canada than over the Alaska mountains.

He added that "it makes sense both from an ecological and economic point of view."

RAIL LINE

"So why not push the idea of a Canada corridor from the outset? Why not build an oil line and a gas line side by side? Why not add a road and, possibly, a rail line as well?"

Davis said the Canadian Wildlife Service has been "quietly" looking for a good corridor route for two years and that it might take a "season or two" to confirm a route.

"But I am already of the opinion that an all-purpose, Canada corridor is feasible from an over-all environment point of view."

The cost of protecting the wildlife will "run into many billions of dollars" but they will "have to be paid," he said.

On the proposal to send oil from an Alaska pipeline by tanker down Canada's west coast, Davis had this to say:

Gunman Blasts 4 Holes In Harbor Gas Tanks

A gunman pumped four bullets into two storage tanks containing gasoline and solvent shortly before midnight at the Standard Oil Company of B.C. depot, 319 Harbor Road.

One tank, containing 4,275 gallons of unleaded gas, was hit three times and 536 gallons leaked out.

The other tank, hit once, contained 6,288 gallons of solvent and 191 gallons were lost.

Other tanks behind the front two were not hit.

The Standard depot contains about a dozen tanks with a capacity of 314,000 gallons of gasoline, 38,000 gallons of diesel oil, 16,000 gallons of solvent, when all are full.

The shooting occurred 14 hours after a Standard Oil truck delivered a full supply of furnace oil to Sandringham Private Hospital, 1650 Fort, where employees have been on strike for almost six months in an attempt to get a first contract.

SANDRINGHAM

Alex Markides, staff representative for the Canadian Union of Public Employees whose Local 1211 is on strike at Sandringham, said this morning he is "very disappointed" the shooting occurred and said the union has no knowledge of it "and we wouldn't take such action.

"Action of this nature helps no one," he said.

Victoria city police received a report of the shooting at 11:51 p.m. Their investigation is continuing.

Deputy fire chief Carl Coates said: "It was a serious situation and one that could have caused a conflagration in the harbor area."

There are a number of businesses in the area, including the Canadian government marine transport department, Nicholson Murdie Machines

Anderson Bitter

By WAYNE MacDONALD
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Esquimalt-Saanich's outspoken pollution-fighting member of parliament, David Anderson, has been removed from the important Canadian-American inter-parliamentary committee.

Anderson claims he was deliberately ousted from the committee because he has rocked the party boat a bit — because he has dared to do what he thinks any responsible MP should do.

That is, he has taken a stand — in this case in opposition to giant oil tankers running down the British Columbia coast endangering precious coastlines — and he has received a lot of personal publicity for his efforts.

SENIOR IN RANK

This, he claims, doesn't go down too well with the brass of the Liberal party — with Prime Minister Trudeau; with the cabinet; and most particularly with other B.C. Liberal MPs, many of whom are senior in rank and years to the 33-year-old bachelor.

Being ousted from the Canadian-American interparliamentary group is close to being the last straw as far as the island MP is concerned.

After all, it is the United States and Canada that are involved in the oil tanker — oil pipeline debate — the question of whether Prudhoe Bay oil should be shipped by an Alaskan Pipeline and wes

Thermal Power Plant for City

A $12 million thermal power plant will be built near Victoria within five years, Resources Minister Ray Williston told the legislature Thursday and at the same time ruled out the possibility of using nuclear power to generate electricity.

It was the first major statement on B.C. power development plans in recent years.

The Island also will get 25-50 megawatt plant at Port Hardy. The larger plant would cost $7.5 million.

Both plants would produce electricity through steam heated by a fossil fuel such as natural gas.

Last February Premier Bennett announced he had asked Ottawa to help in the cost of constructing a nuclear plant near Duncan. The premier later said, however, the Island didn't need a nuclear plant because it is not slated for heavy industrial development.

Hydro chairman Dr. Gordon Shrum said today he had no comment on the government's power plans for the next five years. Then he said the plans are only "stopgap measures".

Shrum is chairman of the B.C. Energy Board which currently is conducting a study into B.C.'s energy needs over the next 15 years. A report is expected within a year.

Other projects announced Thursday are:

Construction of a ninth generating unit at the W. A. C. Bennett Dam.

Construction of a thermal generating station near Port Moody for use either at peak power times in the lower mainland or for normal use.

Bullet holes in a gas tank is proof that someone has a bigger one in his head.

MPs May Get $2,000 Hike

By VICTOR MACKIE
(Times Ottawa Bureau)

OTTAWA — An immediate raise in salaries for members of Parliament to $20,000 from the present $18,000 a year was suggested to the Liberal caucus this week as a possible first step the government may take to improve their take-home pay, it was learned today.

The government is also sounding out other party representatives in the Commons as to their reaction to a total indemnity of $33,000 to be effective in the next Parliament after a general election.

That proposal, greeted with some incredulity from some members of the opposition, would involve the establishment of a taxable indemnity of $25,000 plus a non-taxable expense portion of $8,000. The government would like to get

By DON VIPOND

Better than nine teachers out of 10 stayed away from schools in the Capital region today, strongly supporting their federation in its fight with the provincial government over pensions for retired teachers.

Only schools for the handicapped were staffed as the one-day strike called by the B.C. Teachers' Federation was underlined by a crowd of teachers at the legislature.

Local teachers were joined by both active and retired teachers' delegations from the lower mainland and groups from up-Island in what a local official termed "not a rally but a presence" to show legislators their concern.

Basic issue is the level of pensions for retired teachers. The provincial government, which administers the pension plan, has proposed increases but the teachers' federation says it's "not enough."

$10 INCREASE

The federation estimates the average pension of retired teachers is $2,500 a year. The government has planned increases of about $10 to $20 a month.

Last fall the teachers voted to strike if necessary for improved pension benefits. They left the decision with the executive which has called today's one-day walk-out.

Coates said workers in the machine shop heard the shots and reported the leaking tank. One of them plugged the hole in one tank with a wooden peg.

The pressure in the solvent tank made the liquid spurt out and over the four-foot concrete dike, landing about 15 feet away by the side of Harbor Road.

Foam and sand were applied later.

Solvent is flammable, but not explosive, one official said.

Police, asked if they had heard of a car speeding from the area, said only: "We're investigating two or three leads on this but we don't want to say any more right now."

Officials of Standard Oil in Victoria were not available for comment. District sales manager F. D. Rodway was reported on vacation and his assistant was not in his office.

Two hours after the furnace oil was delivered to Sandringham Thursday, pickets appeared at the Standard Oil depot protesting the action. Union officials said Standard Oil drivers are non-union.

RETURNED

A Standard Oil truck roared into the depot at 8:15 a.m., narrowly missing three pickets and a newspaper reporter on the street. The truck gave one blast on his horn but did not slow down.

A few minutes later, a man who said he is a sales representative for Standard Oil appeared with a Polaroid camera and took pictures of the pickets and the reporter.

He declined to give his name to the reporter or to say why the pictures were being taken.

When asked why he was photographing a reporter as well as the pickets, he said only, "I've got a good picture of you."

At 8:30 a.m., three men came out to inspect the bullet holes in the two tanks.

FEW DAYS

In the strike, the around-the-clock picket line at Sandringham was discontinued Thursday night. Daytime picketing was to continue. Union officials explained that the hospital won't be taking fresh furnace oil for a few days.

Asked about a labor boycott of Standard Oil, Victoria Labor Council president Jack Groves said it is "automatic with any company that crosses a picket line. Union people will not patronize that company. I would hope the B.C. Federation of Labor will declare Standard Oil hot products."

On a radio open-line show this morning, Sandringham supervisor Mrs. Margaret Reynolds and Markides agreed to meet if only to discuss accusations of abusive language by hospital pickets and people who have filled their jobs.

ONE-DAY WALK-OUT 'NOT GOOD ENOUGH'

DAWSON CREEK (CP) — The 250 teachers of the South Peace school district called today for the resignations of teacher federation executives for calling only a one-day strike.

A spokesman said the teachers believe a one-day walkout is not sufficient to influence the government.

. . . TEACHER STRIKE

Across the province it meant a warmly-welcomed holiday for almost half a million pupils. Schools were technically open, a handful of teachers showed up for work, but there were no classes.

Sports events scheduled earlier in schools went ahead.

68 IGNORE CALL

In Greater Victoria, where there are 62 schools and 1,387 teachers, a check of all but one school showed 68 teachers ignored the federation strike and went to school.

Two elementary schools and a senior high school accounted for many of them, said a Greater Victoria Teachers' Association spokesman, but declined to name the schools.

In the Sooke school district, where there are 21 schools, 268 teachers and 6,749 pupils, about a dozen teachers showed up for work.

BOYCOTT

The teacher boycott in the Saanich school district, where there are 18 schools, 233 teachers and about 5,300 pupils, was estimated at least 90 per cent.

Jack Armstrong, chairman of the Saanich school board, said he thought the strike, first province-wide in the 55-year history of the BCTF, "was an exercise in futility" which did nothing but upset parents, teachers and trustees.

The federation would have been further ahead to have its 22,000 member-teachers contribute a day's salary for the benefit of retired teachers.

Today's action was "a day to forget." He said he didn't anticipate any "repercussions" from the boycott.

Jim Killeen, president of the teachers' federation, said members were giving up about $1.2 million in lost wages through the protest in what he called "an appropriate response to highlight the plight of retired teachers."

Food Firms 'Facing Bankruptcy'

Spokesmen for British Columbia grocery products manufacturers told the legislature's agriculture committee today the proposed Synthetic Food Products Act could lead to bankruptcy for many companies.

Appearing on behalf of the Grocery Products Manufacturers, President Ernest Steele said the bill, now before the house, said virtually no food products are free from some form of processing. Steele said the bill gives the government broad powers to restrict the sale of synthetic foods and implies that processed foods are inferior to natural farm products.

Another weakness in the bill, he said, is that it creates an artificial distinction between natural and synthetic foods. Steele added that this could result in a "protectionist" attitude by the government favoring farm products.

He said that all processed foods in Canada are subject to federal food and drug regulations.

"It is simply not true, therefore, to infer or to imply that there is some simple category of synthetic products which can be sold without the normal scrutiny of these procucts."

sniper shot holes in storage tanks at Standard Oil of British Columbia's installation on Harbor Road.

"Naturally, we deplore this type of conduct," Ryan said. "We have absolutely no knowledge of last night's incident, and our position is that this dispute should be settled in a peaceful manner.

"It seems to me, however, that this steady escalation of violence should be enough to get Mr. Cook (Neil Cook, president of National Nursing Homes Ltd., which manages Sandringham) to come over here to negotiate and try to de-escalate this shocking trend to violence," said Ryan.

Ryan endorsed what he called legitimate sanctions against Standard Oil being undertaken by members of the labor council, including cancellation of credit cards.

He said this had already been done by the huge B.C. Government Employees' Union and some municipal firemen.

. . . ANDERSON

coast shipping route versus an all-Canadian MacKenzie Valley land pipeline.

Anderson thinks he could have done a great job on the committee in influencing American opinion. And he has already made inroads by appearing — at his own expense — before congressional hearings in Washington on this very question.

And the decision, he claims, was made by newly-elected Liberal party whip Lloyd Francis of Ottawa and the government house leader, privy council president Allan MacEachen.

POLLUTION

Anderson, chairman of a Commons committee on environmental pollution, was delivered a blow Thursday when a number of government members refused to permit debate on a motion that his committee be allowed to meet in Vancouver and Victoria later this month on the oil issue.

He blames part of the Commons mess on himself. Although suffering from a back injury, he came into the Commons Thursday afternoon to make his motion, but he says he should have been better prepared.

He should have made certain a formal vote could have been taken on the motion to adjourn debate — which, under the technicalities by which the Commons operates — really meant a vote on whether the committee would meet in B.C. or not.

"I should have had five members ready to stand up and appeal and force the vote," he said. "It would have been pretty interesting to see how the B.C. cabinet ministers voted."

Bitter?

Yes.

What now?

"I don't know. I guess personal initiative isn't appreciated too much and I've been getting a lot of publicity. It's starting to come home."

Anderson is not sure what other forms of "punishment" may be awaiting him for his misdemeanors in the cause of B.C. interests.

all-party agreement to such a proposal and announce it during the next election, but that agreement will not be forthcoming.

As an alternative the government may simply announce at the next general election that if it is returned the indemnity for MPs will be substantially increased without announcing how much of an increase is proposed.

IDEA DROPPED

It was apparent from the outline provided the caucus this week by government House Leader Allan MacEachen that the cabinet has abandoned the idea of abolishing the tax-free expense allowance recommended by the Beaupre commission.

The commission, headed by T. M. Beaupre, president of Domtar Ltd., recommended that MPs salaries be boosted to $25,000 but that it all be taxable.

Several Liberals have protested that this would not mean much of a take-home pay increase.

Mass for Boniface

A solemn high mass will be held in St. Andrew's Cathedral at noon Monday for Father Boniface of the Order of the Franciscan Monks, who died Thursday at St. Joseph's Hospital. He was 90.

Bishop Remi De Roo will officiate.

Born Dec. 6, 1880, at Veri, Germany, in the diocese of Paderborn, father Boniface entered the order Nov. 1, 1902, at Amiens, France.

He made his profession as a Franciscan on Nov. 4, 1903, at Cleveland, England, and was ordained to the priesthood Dec. 20, 1908, at Quebec City.

All 63 years of his priesthood were spent in western Canada.

Immediately after the solemn high mass Monday in Victoria the body will be taken to Vancouver where it will lie in St. Francis parish, which he founded. Beginning at 8 p.m., his former parishioners will pay homage to their priest.

Tuesday at 10 a.m. the provincial of the Franciscan Fathers, Fr. John Forest Galvin, O.F.M. will celebrate another funeral mass.

This will be followed by burial in Vancouver's Ocean View Cemetary.

CAPISTRANO BIRDS RETURN ON TIME

SAN JUAN CAPISTRANO, Calif. (UPI) — The mission bells pealed as the sun broke through the fog and the swallows returned to Capistrano on schedule today as they have for nearly 200 years.

Nearly 4,000 tourists gathered, including 500 campers who waited overnight, to watch the birds return.

B.C. Water Proposal Doesn't Worry Davis

Fisheries Minister Jack Davis said today he is not bothered by B.C.'s proposal to assert its constitutional rights over water resource management. (See Page 6.)

In an interview, Davis said there will always be "a sawoff" between Ottawa and the provinces when the question of dual jurisdiction rises over water uses.

Davis had not seen the draft legislation introduced Thursday in the B.C. legislature by Resources Minister Ray Williston. After reading press reports of the draft legislation, Davis said: "I know the provinces resent Ottawa having any say in water matters," but it is "a fact" that fisheries is a federal jurisdiction.

Asked about the conflict last fall over providing water in the Goldstream River when he ordered sufficient flow for salmon spawning, Davis said there need not have been a conflict if there had been "forward planning" to take care of both fish and domestic water needs.

He said "We don't believe in single purposes" for water use, but "we have to come up with joint solutions."

Davis said he thinks the province is "much more worried" that the federal government might prevent building of the Moran dam on the Fraser River.

"Constitutionally we could make it completely uneconomic," Davis said, by demanding inclusion of fish hatcheries and ladders in any dam construction.

GOOD THING

"It's a good thing there are two levels of government." Otherwise one level of government would go "barrelling ahead" on its own.

"It doesn't bother us that we have a federal system," he said.

"In the area of water there have to be these public confrontations and resolutions."

BIG DAMS

Davis said "big hydro dams in the right place may be best from an overall environmental point of view. But single purpose projects like the Ross Dam on the Skagit or the Moran Dam on the Fraser can be a mistake.

"They can do more damage, environmentally speaking than they are worth. They may disrupt scenic values."

Davis, who is the designated minister of Ottawa's emerging department of environmental protection, said the ecologists must be brought in at an early stage and they "must have a veto if environmental considerations suggest that a project is contrary to the public interest."

He said the ecologists will be a "well organized department or agency which takes a multi-disciplinary approach to things and which is given its say before our energy buffs start revving up their bulldozers or spudding their drills into our living land."

He said that his department's inspectors will "keep a close eye especially on coal and oil."

Coal mined in the Rocky Mountains but discarded from the shipments to Japan is "an eyesore" and "cheap." If the coal is burned "we will have to make sure that there are no spillovers of noxious gases into the U.S.A."

Controls will also apply to oil refineries processing low grade crude oil and power plants burning residual oils.
